Roosevelt Holds Nazi Brutality Incredible; Calls on American Nations to Arm in Defense

New World Security Set As Task of Lima Parley

Weakness Admitted Air Needs Stressed Solidarity Predicted Canada Agrees

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt yesterday called for continental solidarity of the 21 American republics and Canada in co-operative action for mutual military defense against aggression.

The President for the first time placed continental defense ahead of national defense. He said the burden rested not alone upon the United States but upon every government in this hemisphere, from Canada to Tierra del Fuego.

Sets Conference Theme

Setting a new tack in Pan-American relations, his statement supplied a cue to discussions of the eight international conference of American States in Lima, Peru, next month.

It marked the strong emphasis to be laid there on common bonds of defense between the Americas, as against predominantly cultural and economic aspects of past Pan-American conferences.

The President emphasized that security of this hemisphere rests not alone upon record peacetime defense measures being taken by this Government but upon co-operative action of nations in this hemisphere as a whole.

Possibility of attack from other continents, he said, is infinitely greater than at any other time in the last 20 years, due to advancements in the science of warfare, particularly in aviation.

He said aviation strides are mainly responsible for this altered conception of national defense and said he and his advisers are considering an increased air force as the first step to insure this hemisphere's safety from attack.

Defense Viewpoint Altered

Air defense, he told reporters, was the principal subject discussed at Monday's White House conference attended by War Department, Treasury and other departmental advisers. But he cautioned newsmen against anticipating developments and against use of figures on the specific number of new planes to be added and the probable increase in the national defense budget. He said discussions have not yet reached the stage where a detailed plan can be announced.

As a result of world events the last few years, and of scientific advancement in waging wars, he said, the whole orientation of this country

Pershing Visits Retired Mounts At Front Royal

Front Royal, Va., Nov. 15 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing, who is now 78, today paid a call upon a couple of retired friends who served with him during the World War.

They were Kidron and Jeff, two old war horses comfortably retired to the stables and fields of the Army's remount depot here.

The general lunched with Col. Warren W. Whitside, commanding officer of the depot, and Mrs. Whitside.

Kidron, now 27, was presented by the French people to Gen. Pershing, who used him as his mount in the Paris victory parade. Jeff, 28, the gift of the American Legion, was ridden by the former commander-in-chief in the New York victory parade. Both have been on "retirement pay" at the depot since 1935.

Birth Rate in Md. Sets 8-Year High

Baltimore, Nov. 15 (AP).—The State health department reported today an increase in the birth rate in Maryland for the first nine months of 1938 compared with all years since 1930.

The department's report listed 21,974 births to October 1, or 17.4 births for every 1,000 of the State's population. The birth rate in the corresponding period last year was 16.8 births for each 1,000.

Cummings to Leave Cabinet in January; James Roosevelt Quits

Son to Recuperate No Successors Named Jackson Mentioned Regret Is Expressed

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings will resign from the Cabinet in January, President Roosevelt said yesterday, to fulfill a three-year desire to return to private law practice.

JAMES ROOSEVELT

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference his eldest son, James, has resigned as a member of the White House secretariat because his doctors do not want him to return to Washington before spring. He is recuperating in California from his operation for stomach ulcers, performed September 11 at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn.

No thought has been given to selection of a successor for either, the President said, but Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson has been prominently mentioned for the At-

Funds, Law Clear Way For Airport

PWA, WPA Co-operate Combination Held Legal Money Is Ready

Funds for construction of Gravelly Point Airport have already been allocated and legal red tape hampering the project has been cut, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

Co-operation of the Army engineers and the Public Works and Works Progress Administrations in building the terminal has been found entirely legal by Attorney General Cummings, the President declared, adding that three conflicting legal opinions prepared by the lawyers of governmental agencies had been considered at the Cabinet meeting Friday. Money for the work was set aside before the Justice Department had passed on the question, the President said.

The new landing field, for which the Civil Aeronautics Authority announced plans in September, will be a 750-acre airport expected to solve "not only Washington's long-hanging airport problem, but to serve as a model for the rest of the Nation" as well.

Proposals are believed to be under consideration for location of a new building at the projected terminal for the Civil Aeronautics Authority, which is charged with the regulation of commercial aviation and the fostering of both private flying and civil aeronautics.

Work on the new airport is expected to start immediately and operations at the terminal are intended to begin in about a year.

Tentative plans for the terminal call for four runways, 5,000 feet in length, with unobstructed approaches in all eight directions. Initial development also will include proper drainage, lighting, fencing and other ground preparations, as well as a terminal building, a large hangar and auxiliary service buildings. Approximately two years will be needed to complete the airport.

Cherry Trees' Fate May Be Decided Friday

Memorial Site Discussed President May Rule Bids to Be Asked

Whether or not the Thomas Jefferson Memorial shall be erected in West Potomac Park at the sacrifice of several hundred Japanese cherry trees and elms may be decided Friday by President Roosevelt.

To the White House yesterday came Stuart Gibboney, acting chairman of the Jefferson Memorial Commission, to discuss the subject with the President.

Gibboney, a New York attorney, said afterward it is still planned to open bids for the foundation contract next Monday.

Meanwhile, Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, was working on a detailed report for submission to the President which will, in all probability, form the basis of his remarks Friday.

"This is a very mixed up situation," Delano said last night. "The (memorial) commission was dead set on the Tidal Basin location. Having received full authority from Congress to select the site and design, it had a right to go ahead.

"I have never favored this memorial but, after the Jefferson commission adopted certain recommendations which we made, there was nothing to do but approve it."

Although President Roosevelt in the past has expressed his appreciation of the beauty of the Japanese cherry blossoms, he has consistently supported the decisions and policies of the memorial group headed by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York, until his death a few months ago.

He co-operated in the formation of the commission, appointing three of its members, approved its proposal to erect a Pantheonesque marble memorial in West Potomac

Chest Obtains 40 Per Cent Of Its $2,000,000 Goal

Community Chest workers were warned last night that efforts to obtain funds for Washington charities must be speeded up if the drive for $2,127,000 is to be closed on schedule.

The warning was issued by drive leaders after total collections of $852,295.45, representing 80,436 pledges, or 40.94 per cent of the total, was reported at a noon meeting of workers yesterday.

"Not more than 145 days of the services which Community Chest member agencies will give during 1939 to Washington's needy and underprivileged can be financed by the amount so far pledged, and there are 220 more days to the year," Herbert L. Willett, jr., Chest director, declared.

Screen Actress Mary Pickford made a surprise appearance at the meeting to wish the volunteer workers success in their efforts. In a brief speech, she encouraged workers to strive against obstacles met in their visits to contributors.

"It is no use pretending that we are anywhere near the goal," Newbold Noyes, principal speaker at the meeting, warned. "Don't let the unfortunate of Washington down. I challenge you to meet their needs."

Noyes said that in many cases, by three or four months of expert service, Chest agencies are able to carry needy families over their crises and set them on the road to independence.

Powers Map Plan to Save Reich's Jews

Britain, U. S. in Move France, Holland Join Nazis Say 'Fine!' Belgian Gates Shut

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 15.—Co-operative action to give many thousands of German Jews sanctuary in Africa and North and South America is being considered by the United States, Great Britain, France and certain smaller nations of Europe.

The British cabinet, at its weekly meeting tomorrow, will decide to what extent the British Empire, with its vast empty spaces, is prepared to throw open the gates to Jewish immigrants. During the last three days, Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Halifax and the colonial and dominion secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, have conferred with American Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

U. S. to Admit 30,000

It is understood Anglo-American discussions are still in a preliminary stage, and nothing definite can be announced. However, the United States is ready to admit 30,000 to 40,000 refugees, according to the London Evening News, which reports the American government desires to "get all the people concerned out of Germany as soon as measures to settle them elsewhere can be taken."

[Kennedy may sail for the United States this week for a conference with President Roosevelt, the United Press reported, quoting the Daily Mail.—Editor's note.]

The British are considering the settling of tens of thousands of Jews in sparsely populated areas of the empire, while the United States would be asked to use her "Good Neighbor" influence with the South American republics to permit Jewish immigration on a large scale.

Belgian Gates Shut

Among the European powers, the Netherlands government has begun negotiations with Britain, France, Belgium, Denmark and Switzerland, to find new homes for German Jews. The Netherlands is to establish two camps to house 2,000 refugees. More may be done along these lines, but the main idea prevailing in London is to get the refugees away from overcrowded Europe and into the open spaces of the world.

[The attitude of the other nations to which the Netherlands appealed was not fully known, but it was learned through a special representative sent to Brussels that Belgium was unwilling to admit additional refugees, the Associated Press

Museum Given Ice Age Virginia Musk Ox's Tooth

A 2-inch molar found in the Skyline Caverns near Front Royal, Va., was yesterday presented to the National Museum after it had been identified as part of an ancient animal of the ice age similar to the present Arctic musk-ox.

Termed "one of the most interesting fossils that has been found in this region," the tooth is the first relic of the euceratherium americanum to be uncovered in Virginia and only the second trace of this type of mammal ever to be found anywhere. Cumberland, Md., is the site of the original discovery.

The tooth was found by Theodore Mustaeus, Front Royal businessman, who sent it last week to his friend, Dr. Austin H. Clark, of the National Museum. Dr. C. Lewis Gazin of the Museum staff identified it.

Lindbergh Looking For a Berlin Home

Berlin, Nov. 15 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was described today by German friends as finding the Reich such a center for scientific aviation research that he wished to spend the winter in Berlin. They disclosed he is looking for a house for his family.

Roosevelt Coldly Serious as He Attacks German Persecutions

By William V. Nessly.

Minds intent on the strained international situation and prospect of a momentous pronouncement on Germany's campaign against the Jews, 200 newspaper reporters were drawn to President Roosevelt's press conference yesterday.

The number was indicative of the wide interest in what comment the Chief Executive might have, following this country's order to her Ambassador to Berlin to return here for report and consultation.

Filing into the President's office after a brief delay in the waiting room, the reporters gathered fanwise about his desk, the first to gain position waiting full minutes in serious anticipation for those behind to enter and spread throughout the big room. Finally from the rear came the usual cry—

"All in!"

But it was not with weighty international affairs that the first questions directed at the unsmiling Chief Executive were concerned.

"Mr. President, what is the status of the Gravelly Point airport?"

And——

"Mr. President, have you any comment on the proposal to cut down some of the cherry trees?"

ROOSEVELT

Quickly, the President explained the status of the airport but said he would withhold comment on the cherry trees until his Friday meeting with the newspaper people, when he would discuss them extensively.

More serious things than cherry trees now were before him.

Without waiting for the inevitable question regarding German attacks on the Jews, Mr. Roosevelt picked from his desk a prepared statement, and in a cold, serious voice new to many of his listeners, read aloud.

"... deeply shocked public opinion in the United States ... I myself could scarcely believe that such things could occur in a twentieth century civilization ..."

Reporters strained to catch every word, and to watch the President's serious expression as he read. Some scribbled furi-

German Press Warns U. S. Critics Peril Jews

To Use Hostages, 'No Matter How Shocking' Third of Wealth Taken Over, Funk Reveals Wilson Takes Leave After Seeing Ribbentrop

By the United Press.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—Economics Minister Walther Funk tonight announced that $800,000,000 of Jewish wealth, nearly one-third of the holdings of all German Jews, had been taken from them in the Nazi drive to eliminate Jews from the Reich's economic life.

The nation's 700,000 Jews, he said, will be obliterated from German business affairs.

"It has been established that Jewish wealth totaled 7,000,000,000 marks and 2,000,000,000 marks already have been transferred to German hands," Funk said, adding that the Jews will receive German bonds as "indemnity" for their business properties which have "passed into Aryan hands.

"All necessary measures will be taken to maintain the value of the stocks and merchandise which will be placed at the disposition of the population in a useful and reasonable fashion," he said.

Threaten New Penalties

Funk warned against investment of funds for the "Aryanization" of the Jewish businesses to such an extent that the Reich money market would suffer to the detriment of "other investments and German loans."

Funk's announcement followed by a few minutes a warning by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's "S. S." elite guards' organization, that German Jews would suffer further penalties if anti-Nazi agitation continued in the United States.

The controlled Nazi press loosed attacks on "the purposeful politicians of Washington" as United States Ambassador Wilson prepared to sail for home to report to President Roosevelt on Germany's new wave of measures against the Jews.

Wilson, who leaves Berlin Wednesday night and sails from Le Havre, France, aboard the S. S. Manhattan Thursday night, visited the foreign office late today and

King Tells Pope Marriage Law Will Be Modified

Vatican City, Nov. 15 (AP).—A friendly letter from King Vittorio Emanuele to Pope Pius assuring him efforts would be made to meet the Vatican's objections to new Italian marriage laws was reported today by L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper.

The greatest consideration" for the Pope's views, made known in personal letters to the King and Premier Mussolini, was promised in the monarch's reply.

The Pope objected to the new regulations decreed Thursday prohibiting marriages of Italians "of the Aryan race with a person belonging to another race."

Japanese Soldiers Throw Acid at U. S. Bishop

Shanghai, Nov. 16 (Tuesday) (U.P.). Japanese soldiers threw a bottle of carbolic acid at Dr. Logan Roots, veteran American missionary, when he remonstrated against their efforts to expel Chinese refugees from St. Michael's Church in Wuchang, according to messages from Hankow today.

The missionary, who is bishop of the Hankow diocese, was not hit, but was jostled in later fisticuffs, during which the American flag was knocked down.

Pondering Budget, Chief Librarian Speeds; Is Fined

Dr. George F. Bowerman, 70, chief librarian for the District, was fined $5 in Traffic Court yesterday for speeding, "because I was preoccupied with my budget estimates."

Dr. Bowerman was stopped by Motorcycle Policeman Joseph Osterman on Sherman avenue northwest, October 11. Osterman testified the librarian was traveling 35 miles per hour.

"I was on my way to the District Building to talk over coming appropriations and failed to keep a check on my speedometer," Dr. Bowerman explained to Judge John P. McMahon.

Britain, France Hail Roosevelt Blast at Nazis

Arms Plans Welcomed Latin America Reserved Germans Are Silent

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Nov. 16.—President Roosevelt's statements condemning German treatment of Jews and revealing the unprecedented scope of America's defense program today attracted wide interest abroad.

European chancelleries and editorial offices eagerly discussed the implications of the statements. British and French government circles generally approved and welcomed the American President's firm position. Totalitarian states are certain to react unfavorably.

Defense Plans Welcomed

The British press gave Roosevelt's statements the most prominent positions on their main pages under such headlines as: "Stern Words by the United States President," "Roosevelt Condemns Nazi Jew Baiting," "Roosevelt Condemns Jew Drive" and—in the tabloid Daily Mirror—"U. S. A. Move to Split With Germany."

The President's statement on national defense covered a much broader field, diplomatically speaking.

Germans Silent

British Parliamentary circles welcomed his disclosures on defense plans on the grounds that United States armament menaced nobody but reinforced world peace.

Latin America generally welcomed the President's proposal for joint defense of the Western Hemisphere, but with certain expected reservations. Most diplomats below the Rio Grande felt it safer to stress solidarity in the face of possible attack from another continent, without committing themselves to declarations which

Warrings Handled $2,000,000 A Year, Pine Asserts at Trial

The Warring brothers pyramided a shoestring into a Washington gambling business that covered $2,000,000 a year in bets, District Attorney Pine told a District Court jury yesterday as he opened prosecution of the trio and their tax experts for conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Bribes the Warrings gave the police, bail bond fees and fines paid for their henchmen, Pine said, betrayed the magnitude of the gang's racket. He said witnesses for the Government would tell the details.

Over vigorous objection by former District Attorney Rover—which was overruled by Justice Laws, presiding—Pine told the jury how the numbers racket operated. The Warrings, he said, accepted bets on numbers of three digits and paid off at 600 to 1. The odds are 999 to 1, which gave the gang a "percentage" of 399 in 1,000.

The Warrings were good humored and cheerful when they took places before Justice Laws for the trial that may mean two years in prison and $10,000 fine for each of them. Emmitt, 42, whom Pine called "the head man, the brains of the gang," stared intently at each talesman who entered the box.

Leo Paul, 32, "who worked 8 or 10 hours a day in the numbers headquarters," listened in silence. Charles "Rags," 38, "who did the

President Says U. S. Is 'Shocked' by War on Jews

'Scarcely Believes' Not in 20th Century Reaction Expected Reich Envoy Silent

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt struck last night at the Nazi persecution of Jews in a brief, icily phrased statement as forceful as it was unprecedented.

Bringing much closer the possibility of a severance of diplomatic relations between this country and the Third Reich, the President, in four sentences, employing 91 words, told his press conference:

"The news of the past few days from Germany has deeply shocked public opinion in the United States. Such news from any part of the world would inevitably produce a similar profound reaction among American people in every part of the Nation.

Barbarism Incredible

"I myself could scarcely believe that such things could occur in a twentieth century civilization.

"With a view to gaining a first-hand picture of the situation in Germany I asked the Secretary of State to order our Ambassador in Berlin to return at once for report and consultation."

The President revealed that Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson will embark on the steamship Manhattan Thursday. At the State Department it was said that Wilson should arrive in New York about November 23, possibly in time to confer with Secretary of State Cordell Hull before the latter's departure Thanksgiving week-end for the Inter-American Conference at Lima, Peru, December 9.

Quick German repercussions are expected from the President's statement. The view was widely held in Washington last night that the President's remarks had been carefully devised as part of a plan to force the hand of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler on the anti-Jewish campaign.

Attaches of the German Embassy here intimated that Wilson's impending departure had been known for some time, but that they had believed he was merely coming home for the Christmas holidays. Ambassador Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff had no comment.

Long Breach Likely

First possibility, it appeared, is an indefinite suspension of German-American relations. The President, asked if Wilson were being "recalled," said casually that the Ambassador's return, in the technical parlance of diplomacy, could not exactly be termed a "recall." He left the obvious inference that there was little difference in the situations.

The President was asked further if there had been a formal protest by this Government to the Reich. He said there had not been as yet. There was the implication that such a protest may be forthcoming.

Questioned about the activities of the International Refugee Committee, the President said that the committee was being extended aid to help it take care of an increasingly difficult situation.

Asked if he had given thought, in times when Jews are being driven about the world, to possible sanctuaries for them, the President said he had given that subject a great deal of study. He smilingly declined to be more specific as to the names of any places of such refuge.

TVA Inquiry Given Access To Tax Returns

By President's Order Justices Quiz Aide Size of Dams Is Issue

President Roosevelt yesterday granted to the special Congressional committee to investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority blanket authority to inspect income tax returns of persons and corporations from 1925 through 1937. This action, which has been severly criticized in the few instances where it has been taken in the past, was by Executive order and comes on the eve of testimony by Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern group of utilities, before the committee.

Aside from the Executive action today, there was activity in the other two departments of the Government—the legislative and judicial—regarding the TVA. While the joint House and Senate committee was taking testimony about the Federal power project, the constitutionality of the whole TVA set-up was being argued in the Supreme Court.

The Back Door

Counsel for the 13 utilities which remain as appellants against the TVA assailed the law which they said took "the back door road around the Constitution," in order to authorize the generation and sale of electricity in competition with private enterprise. A seven-justice court heard the concluding arguments and is expected to render decision early in December.

Francis Biddle, special counsel for the joint committee, said he had asked for the executive order to examine income tax returns to permit the assembling of data on the depreciation of certain private utility companies which are under negotiation for sale to municipalities in the TVA area. There was a dispute, he said, between the TVA and Willkie over these depreciation items. There was no intent to examine the personal tax returns of Willkie or others, he indicated.

A New Departure

Empowering a Congressional committee to go into tax returns has not been granted by Administrations previous to the Roosevelt regime save in the case of committees directly interested in tax matters. Two recent examples of the granting of this power to a committee engaged in a different type of inquiry were the executive orders given to the Senate Antilobbying Committee.

Biddle's announcement highlighted a day of widespread TVA developments, as Surgeon General Thomas Parran told the committee that he believed the Public Health Service was entirely justified in cooperating with TVA to stamp out disease.

Before the Supreme Court, TVA counsel defended the authority under sharp questioning from two "conservative" justices, Butler and McReynolds.

Questioned by a Republican member of the TVA investigating committee, Parran denied that the health service was spending more in Tennessee than in any other Southern States.

Representative Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, protested that there had been no such disease control measures employed at dams in Ohio as had been used at the TVA reservoirs.

At the Supreme Court, Justice McReynolds questioned James L. Fly, TVA counsel, at length as to whether the Government could build dams solely for the purpose of manufacturing and selling power.

Size of Gains

The Government attorney insisted this question was not involved in the case, but when pressed for an answer said he felt the court might hold that the Government may build "any structure on navigable waters it desires."

McReynolds asked why TVA dams were made 200 feet high "when 50 feet would accomplish the purpose of flood control."

"The size of the project is for the determination of Congress," Fly responded.

"It is not the size but the purposes that is the question," McReynolds said. "When 50 feet would be enough the dams are built 200 feet in order to get power. Can the court inquire into that?"

"It wouldn't disturb me if it did," Fly said.

Naming of Landon Called Democratic

Buenos Aires, Nov. 14 (AP).—La Nacion commented favorably today on the inclusion of Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, in the United States delegation to the Lima Intra-American Conference December 9.

"This attitude represents a healthy Democratic state which proves that in the United States differences of mind and hostilities between groups have value only during the period of battle, after which the air which men can give is esteemed regardless of whether they are political adversaries," the paper said.

"By this conduct the government shows its purpose above all is to give the North American delegation the brilliance which it should have and testifies to the feeling of respect which it has toward the nations meeting in the periodic assembly of America."

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Holds Most of the Voters He Is More Popular Than His Party

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Nov. 15.—Despite important Republican gains in last Tuesday's election, President Roosevelt is approved by a majority of voters throughout the nation and continues to be more popular than the Democratic Party itself.

GALLUP.

The President's popularity was measured by a scientific Institute survey just before the election — a survey conducted along exactly the same methods as those used in forecasting the election results. This study showed 54.4 per cent of the major party voters are for Roosevelt, 45.6 per cent against him.

The party's strength on the other hand, as revealed in total popular vote for Democratic Congressmen last week, is estimated at 52.6 per cent, or 1.8 per cent under the President's strength.

Since President Roosevelt took office there has been a close correlation between his popularity and the strength of his party. The two figures have varied by margins of only 2 to 3.5 per cent, as following table shows:

Major Party Popular Vote

	For Dem. Congressmen	For President	Difference
1932	57%	59%	2
1934	57	59*	2
1936	59	62.5	3.5
Today ..	52.6	54.4*	1.8

*Institute survey.

Politically-minded statisticians have looked to the November 8 election figures as an important check-up on the various measurements of President Roosevelt's popularity today. Judging by the close correlation between the Institute's figure for Roosevelt's strength before the election and the election result itself, the accuracy of the Institute's presidential barometer appears to have been confirmed.

The basic meaning of the figure 54.4 per cent for Roosevelt's popularity is that he enters his last two years with fairly good-sized majority of voters supporting him. As a matter of fact the President's popularity is higher today than it has been at several points in the last four years.

For example, Institute studies found him at only 52 per cent directly after Landon was nominated in 1936. In the autumn of 1935, after a long and bitter session of Congress, the figure was as low as 50.5 per cent. And the surveys indicate that his popularity curve often spurts sharply upward as the President captures public imagination by his acts.

His peace appeal to Hitler and Chamberlain, for instance, brought about a sharp, though temporary, rise in his popularity. If the pattern of other years is repeated, the curve may again turn upward, depending on the march of events.

Head of Bankers Demands U. S. Cut Its Deficit

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Nov. 15.—Orval W. Adams, president of the American Bankers Association, demanded at the association's convention today that the Federal Government reduce the deficit and begin paying the public debt.

A three-cornered fight for the second vice presidency of the association flared tonight among W. Laird Dean, of Topeka, Kans.; P. D. Houston, of Nashville, and Frank P. Powers, of Mora, Minn. The nominating committee's choice will be announced tomorrow, when the annual election is held. The second vice president will be advanced automatically to the presidency in 1940.

Ben Dubois, of Sauke Center, Minn., introduced a resolution asking Congress and the State Legislatures to enact laws prohibiting branch banking in any form and the control or operation of any banks through group and holding companies.

Making the annual president's address, Adams said:

"By way of self-defense and in order to save the American system, we must organize our depositors and give them and all others who have accumulated something an economic education. This is the only practical way I know of to resist the pressure groups and vote-buying politicians who are destroying and wasting the savings of our depositors and of all our citizens who have worked and saved. . . .

"Never should the American Bankers Association remain silent when politicians are spending the country into bankruptcy. We must take the battle to our depositors. We must make them realize that it is their fight; that 90 per cent of the assets of the country belong to them . . ."

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, introduced by Adams as a conservative and a "tower of strength against the Treasury raiders" told the banker critics of President Roosevelt that the President had saved the banks of the Nation in the early days of his Administration.

Jones said there have been changing modes in banking and, as an example, referred to the huge business done annually by automobile finance companies—a type of loan banks formerly would not handle.

He said bankers now realize the importance of loans of this character and the money to be made from such loans. He said banks, too, are beginning to extend long-term loans to business.

Envisioning an America of continued free enterprise, W. J. Cameron, of Detroit, called on the bankers and the Nation's business men to rely on "uninspired plugging" as the only positive way of insuring American business.

"It would be worth $25,000,000,000 to this country," he said, "if our business men would learn that business is not coming back; it must be brought back."

Van Duzer to Speak

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer will speak and motion pictures will be shown at the monthly meeting of the Southwest Citizens Association at the Jefferson Junior High School tomorrow night at 8 p. m. Plans for a new junior high school will be discussed.

Plans to Revise Tax Structure In Abeyance

Wait Presidential Parley Major Shifts in Doubt Income's Escape Likely

All plans for another overhauling of the tax structure in quest of new revenue-producing levies have been held in abeyance pending the President's conference with Congressional leaders at Warm Springs, Ga., later this month, it was learned yesterday.

Tax policies will figure prominently in the Warm Springs conference, one reliable informant said. It was indicated the President may be strongly advised against any sweeping revision of the tax laws next session, such as alterations in the individual income brackets, or changes in the corporation income tax while business is undergoing revival.

Three Moves Planned

Only three tax moves during the session opening in January appeared definitely determined on last night. They were:

Extension of the so-called nuisance levies expiring next JJuly 1.

Extension of the undivided profits tax in its present greatly modified form, with levies ranging from 16½ to 19 per cent on incomes over $25,000, dedepending on earnings retained. The last Congress limited the life of tax to two years.

An administration attempt by direct legislation to remove existing tax exemptions from the vast field of Federal, State and local government securities. The proposal of the President applies only to future issues.

G. O. P. to Act

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, which is charged with initiating tax legislation, has not returned from North Carolina, but he is expected to attend the Warm Springs conference. Doughon will arrive at the Capitol for preliminary tax discussions sometime this week.

Meanwhile, Representative Frank Crowther (Republican), of New York, a minority member of the Ways and Means Tax subcommittee, said Republicans will insist on a simplification of tax schedules at this session.

Crowther said the House Republican organization (increased by 81 in last week's elections) will demand 10 votes instead of 7 on the 25-man House Ways and Means Committee.

There are now 8 vacancies on the committee, 7 of them Democratic.

Opposes End of Exemptions

Crowther opposed any effort to remove tax exemptions from securities by direct legislation, contending it would yield only $65,000,000 additional in revenue, spare present holders of $65,000,000,000 in Government issue of all types and increase the value of their holdings, and "finally wind up in the courts."

He said he has abandoned his bill for a Federal sales tax "because local governments now have preempted that field."

Shortly after Congress convenes, a special Senate committee headed by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, will consider proposals to abolish tax exemptions on future security issues.

Wisconsin G. O. P. Governor-Elect Denies Vote Was New Deal Blow

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Governor-elect Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin, said today he was going to be a "firing line" Governor and work to restore industrial peace by "courteous" ousting of labor racketeers.

HEIL

He said he did not interpret his victory over former Gov. Philip F. La Follette as a blow at the New Deal, declaring purely local issues were involved.

"The La Follette had endeared themselves by working for 40 years on the State pay roll," he said in an interview. "Maybe you'd better put that 'endeared' in quotes."

Heil, who came here to attend the auto show, said:

"We are going to have no strikes and no picket lines.

"Labor disputes are chiefly caused by mismanagement and by racketeers who try to coerce workers for their own benefit. I am going to run those racketeers out of Wisconsin, courteously if I can."

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 15 (AP).—Representative Donald L. O'Toole (Democrat), New York, a member of the House committee investigating campaign expenses, said today he was convinced "an excessive amount of money was spent in the last election in Delaware."

O'Toole has conducted hearings into expenses in the campaign which placed Republican candidates in State and National offices last Tuesday.

"I am convinced more than the legal amount allowed for Congressional candidates was spent and I shall report that to the committee so that further action may be taken," he said.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 15 (AP).—Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., newspaper publisher and prominent Republican, predicted today President Roosevelt would run for a third term and win re-election.

"No one in the President's party is strong enough with the public to carry through the New Deal program," he said in an interview.

"Only a coalition of the conservatives of both parties could defeat him and I'm inclined to believe the President will win re-election on the basis of carrying the 'solid South,' New York, Illinois and California—those States which are regarded by many political authorities as constituting the Democratic majority."

Miss Gladys Pyle, elected to fill the balance of the unexpired term of the late Senator Norbeck (Republican), South Dakota, and Thomas Stork, appointed to fill the unexpired term of Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, who resigned, yesterday were given two rooms in the Senate Office Building suite formerly occupied by Senator Hitchcock (Democrat), South Dakota, defeated in the Democratic primary.

Eric G. Barry, elected for the remainder of the unexpired term of Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, who resigned, was assigned to a room in the suite formerly occupied by Senator Reames (Democrat), Oregon, whose appointment expired with last week's election.

The short term Senators will not actually take the oath of office.

U. S. Court Rules Railroads Owe N. J. $50,000,000 Tax

Philadelphia, Nov. 15 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today eight Eastern railroads must pay the State of New Jersey more than $50,000,000 in additional taxes for 1932 and 1933.

The railroads and the amounts they are listed as owing are:

Erie, $4,031,056; New Jersey and New York, $141,101; New York, Susquehanna and Western, $786,890; New York Central, $2,487,864; Lehigh Valley, $4,788,589; Delaware Lackawanna and Western, $6,546,367; Reading, $286,506; Central of New Jersey, $10,186,185, and Central of New Jersey Affiliates, $245,439.

The railroads contended they were assessed on 100 per cent of their replacement value, whereas other property is taxed on 30 to 60 per cent of actual value.

Lehman Calls Court to Hear Dewey Charge

Vote Frauds Alleged To Sit in Albany County 200 Cases Are Ready

By the United Press.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman tonight summoned an extraordinary special and trial term of the State Supreme Court to investigate alleged election frauds in Albany County—a major charge made by Thomas E. Dewey, Republican, in his unsuccessful bid for the governorship.

Lehman summoned the court to meet in Albany December 12. He designated Supreme Court Justice John MacCrate, of Brooklyn, to preside.

Lehan acted at the request of Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., who had been investigating registrations in Albany.

"At the present time we have evidence ready to present the grand jury in upwards of 200 cases of false registration and other crimes of the degree of felony against the election franchise," Bennett told the Governor. "This involves a volume of work which would seriously interfere with the regular work of the district attorney of Albany County, and the regular grand jury here, if it were to be presented to that body.

"For the same reason it is deemed expedient to designate an additional justice to handle these cases.

"The presentation of these matters to the grand jury and the trial of any indictments which may be voted will be handled by my regular staff."

In the recent campaign, Dewey charged that more people were registered in the City of Albany, normally an everwhelmingly Democratic city, than could be found in the city directory.

Denies Star Monopoly Hoyal on Stand Today Testifies to F. C. C.

Although N. B. C. artist contracts carry a clause restricting their performances to the N. B. C. network, actually the artists are permitted to appear on rival networks or stations, Dan S. Tuthill, managing director of the N. B. C. Artists' Service, Inc., told the Federal Communications Commission yesterday.

Under cross-examination by William J. Dempsey, FCC chief counsel, Tuthill said this had been N. B. C.'s policy for the past five years. He could not explain why the clause still appears in the contracts.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch asked him if he would recommend that the exclusive clause be deleted from future contracts. After some hesitation, Tuthill said he would.

The second day of the FCC chain monopoly hearing was devoted entirely to the relationship between the National Broadcasting Co. and its artists.

Tuthill in direct testimony stated that the huge demand for talent for broadcasting necessitated the formation of a separate bureau to handle artists only.

Witnesses scheduled for today include Hugh M. Beville, head of the N. B. C. statistical department, and John F. Royal, N. B. C. vice president in charge of programs.

Tenth of D. C. Children Have Sight Defects

Exact Figure 11.3 Pct. Upper Grades Worst Many in Traffic Peril

Highlights of lectures yesterday at the Institute on Conservation of Vision, which is being held daily this week in the District Medical Society auditorium, 1719 M street northwest, were:

Of 17,000 Washington school children examined last year, 11.3 per cent were suffering from defective vision due to errors in the focusing mechanism of the eye.

The program for home instruction of crippled and invalid children, which is being carried out by the local Works Progress Administration, will be extended to include children whose sight is so bad that their lives are endangered by traffic.

Eye infections due to syphilis, whether direct or brought to the eye indirectly through the bloodstream, usually can be cured if treatment is begun in early stages of the disease.

Colored Children Worst

Dr. Frank D. Costenbader, of the staff of Children's Hospital, said that the percentage of school children found suffering from vision defects that require glasses probably would hold for all school children in the District.

Examinations, he explained, showed that 10.2 per cent of white children and 13.5 per cent of colored were suffering from defects in eye focusing mechanism. One Washington school child out of 200 is cross-eyed, he declared.

Rapid increase in eye defects as children advance from lower to higher grades was one of the disclosures made by Dr. Costenbader.

College Per Cent Climbs

In the case of white children, he said, 5 per cent in kindergarten revealed refractive errors or focusing defects. In the first grade, the percentage jumps to 8 and in the fourth grade to 11. In all grades above the fourth, the percentage was 23. But he believed this high figure was due in part to the fact that a large number of those examined complained of eye strain.

With respect to colored school children, he said, the percentages were: kindergarten, 7; first grade, 10; fourth grade, 21; all other grades, 35.

"These figures," he said, "would indicate that between 10,000 and 11,000 Washington school children have visual errors."

Examination of applicants for admission to Wilson Teachers' College, Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest, he said, indicated that from 25 to 35 per cent were suffering from visual defects.

Traffic Danger Cited

"We may get some home instruction for severe cases where children's lives are endangered in crossing streets to reach school," Dr. Costenbader said.

Dr. Ernest Sheppard, eye specialist, emphasized that syphilis manifestations in the eye usually can be cleared up if treatment is undertaken early enough.

He said it would be highly desirable to have Washington school children examined by oculists, who could more accurately ascertain existence of eye defects and their nature than physicians who make general examinations. The institute is sponsored by the District Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

WPA Directors To Confer Here

Ways to obtain greater occupational training for America's unemployed, particularly those on WPA, will be studied at a four-day conference of State education and recreation directors of the WPA opening this morning at the Washington Hotel.

Classes in traffic safety, "economical vacations for low-income groups," and means whereby education and recreation programs of the Federal Government can be better co-ordinated also will be discussed.

A highlight of the conference will be the general discussion Friday afternoon when Mrs. Roosevelt will serve as chairman and an evaluation will be made of the work done in the two divisions to date.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator; Aubrey Williams, deputy administrator, and Eduard C. Lindeman, director of the education division, will speak to the State officials Thursday night. A laboratory to demonstrate methods and standards in such crafts as weaving, basketry and toy making will be run in connection with the conference.

1,770 Students X-Rayed In Tuberculosis Tests

Examining apparatus will be moved to Cardozo High School today for the first of a series of tests in colored schools.

Fay Wray Writes Second Act Of 'Whose Little Girl Are You?'

Playwright Saunders in Hospital for Nerves He Takes Daughter for Company Enter, Estranged Wife Fay

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 15.—The real-life scenario which has brought two Hollywood celebrities, John Monk Saunders, author playwright and his actress wife, Fay Wray—under the roof of the University of Virginia Hospital here appeared tonight to be moving toward a climax. What that is to be, however, was known only to the principals.

This much was known: The most important figure in the drama is their 2-year-old daughter, Susan Cary, who also is in the hospital, although, like her mother, she is quite well. Most of the spoken lines have had to do with little Susan Cary.

Saunders, 41-year-old Rhodes scholar and World War flier, last turned out "A Yank at Oxford," but most of his Hollywood hits have had to do with flying—"Wings," "The Dawn Patrol" and "The Last Flight."

A plane also figures in the drama—or whatever it is—that is now headed toward a show-down here.

Miss Wray, blue-eyed, brown-haired star of "Viva Villa," "The Wedding March," and "The Affairs of Cellini," boarded a transport plane in California five days ago and flew to New York. There she was joined by Adela Rogers St. John, the fictionist, and J. E. Lumbard, the actress' attorney.

The trio started for Charlottesville, changing trains in Washington early Friday morning.

Saunders had arrived in Charlottesville two weeks before; with him was little Susan Cary and the child's nurse.

Those who saw Saunders said he was pale and nervous. After spending several days at a hotel he moved out to the Farmington Country Club, and it was announced that he planned later to take over a house. Meantime he began doing some research work in the library of the University of Virginia.

Then last week he was admitted to the hospital suffering from what physicians described as "nervousness and insomnia." The baby and its nurse went along to the hospital when no suitable place could be found for the child.

Miss Wray, Miss St. John and Attorney Lumbard arrived here last Friday. There was much telephoning, and, finally, Miss Wray moved into the hospital, taking up her quarters in a wing some distance removed from that of her husband. It was explained that she had been admitted for a "rest."

In the last two days Miss Wray has been seen walking through the hospital corridors to visit her husband on numerous occasions. Today she left the hospital to visit a telegraph office.

Saunders meantime is reported to be improving. When he first went to the hospital, it was explained that he had been under a terrific strain and was unable to sleep. Reports from the hospital today said that he was "sleeping like a baby," and that he soon would be able to leave.

When that time comes, whatever mystery is involved ought to be pretty well cleared up, although it must be said that persons close to the couple scoff at the mystery talk.

On the basis of the election, 41 Congress seats will be apportioned to the liberal Democrats; 23 to the Farmer-Labor Party; 2 to the Progressive Party, and 14 to liberal Republicans.

James Speer, 3d, last year's president, will preside until his successor is chosen.

Recount Asked By Opponent Of Kennedy

Ellison Lost by 290 Votes 'D. C. Mayoralty' at Stake Quick Check Promised

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 15.—Daniel Ellison (Republican), defeated by Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, by 290 votes, asked a recount today in the Fourth Congressional District of Maryland.

He submitted his petition after official figures showed Kennedy received 37,416 votes and Ellison 37,126 in the November 8 elections.

Kennedy, veteran member of the House, is in line for chairmanship of the District Committee, a position which carries the title of "unofficial mayor of Washington."

Members of the elections board said arrangements would be made tomorrow for the recount demanded by Ellison. They said recounting of the votes could be accomplished in a few hours because the district is entirely within the City of Baltimore where voting machines are used.

Ellison's letter to the board read: "Notice is hereby given of my intention to contest the election for office of member of the House of Representatives . . . from the Fourth District . . . in pursuance of this notice and the law applicable thereto . . . you will please proceed within five days from receipt of this notice to inspect and examine the voting machines."

CIO Votes Not To Compromise With A. F. of L.

New Set-Up Adopted Lewis Is Cheered 'Dictatorship' Liked

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 15.—The C. I. O. set itself up tonight as a permanent Congress of Industrial Organizations after answering President Roosevelt's plea for labor peace with the declaration that it would accept "no compromise" with the A. F. of L.

Delegates to the union's first convention adopted two articles of a proposed constitution. The first gave the organization its new name and the second set forth the objects of the congress.

Setup Like A. F. of L.

Joseph Curran, head of the National Maritime Union, and Harry Bridges, C. I. O. director on the West Coast, said they believed the second article should be reconsidered after copies of the constitution had been distributed to the 500 delegates. Their motion was not acted upon but the meeting was adjourned until tomorrow.

The proposed constitution, which will be given first consideration tomorrow, resembles in many respects that of the A. F. of L.—but gives the central organization more power in some respects and more dues per member.

A per capita tax assessment of 5 cents a month on the membership of national and international unions was proposed, compared with the present 2 cents per member assessment of similar units of the A. F. of L., which includes a special assessment of 1 cent.

Members of local industrial unions, with charters resembling the "federal" charters issued by the A. F. of L., would be taxed 50 cents a month, compared with 35 cents by the federation.

The federation's executive council has the power to suspend national and international unions, as it did the eight big unions which formed the C. I. O., three years ago, but only the C. I. O.'s convention would have the authority to suspend or expel one of its unions.

The C. I. O.'s executive board will have 45 members. The A. F. of L. board has 15.

Cheer "No Compromise"

The convention staged a 14-minute demonstration after adopting without dissent the officers' reports which included the declaration "with finality" of "no compromise" in peace negotiations.

The cheers lasted so long that Chairman John L. Lewis, who had turned the gavel over to Vice Chairman Philip Murray during the day, interrupted to say:

"Don't you know up to now you've been applauding a dictator? Don't you think the C. I. O. is merely a dictatorship, and that the chairman of it set himself up in office without your will?"

"We love it," someone in the back of the flag-decked hall yelled.

The eight-page "peace" committee report blamed the A. F. of L. for the labor breach and reviewed the unsuccessful negotiations between committees of the rival unions late in 1937. The report concluded:

"The C. I. O. states with finality there can be no compromise with its fundamental purpose and aim of organizing workers into powerful industrial unions, nor with its obligation to fully protect the rights and interests of all its members and affiliated organizations. The C. I. O. accepts the goal of unity in the labor movement and declares any program for the attainment of such a goal must embrace as an essential prelude those fundamental purposes and principles."

The report, Acting Chairman Murray assured the 500 delegates from 42 unions and organizing committees, "opens wide the door to labor unity—it does not deny the President's desires for peace in the labor movement."

Move to Change Wise Trial Board Is Overruled

Luther C. Wise, suspended District policeman who was acquitted last May of attempting to extort money from a restaurant manager, faced the Police Trial Board yesterday on charges of conduct prejudicial to the "conduct, reputation and good order" of the department.

Charles Ford, the accused man's attorney, challenged the right of George Reber Littlehales, assistant corporation counsel, to sit as chairman of the board.

Contending that all charges against policeman are drafted and prosecuted by the corporation counsel's office, Ford argued it was "improper for a member of that office to act also as judge." His motion to remove Littlehales from the board was overruled.

Yesterday's session adjourned while Ford was attacking a bill of particulars filed with the charge. He said the bill claimed Wise extorted the money in one instance and described the incident as a loan in another portion of the specifications.

Wise was acquitted in District Court after he was accused of taking $10 from Fred Kosmos, cafe manager. Wise insisted the money was a loan to "tide him over" a pay decrease.

Now Open—on The Sixth Floor

Here is a refreshingly new idea that presents in the most understandable manner the ways and means by which you can decorate and furnish your home, apartment or room—beautifully, livably, practically without too great an expense. The doors of the Young Home Planner's Shop are hospitably open to everyone — career women with little time to shop—bachelors taking an apartment—but the inspiring idea was born to be of special service to young couples starting out on limited incomes but with a lot of taste.

The idea in brief—

Color is our basic theme—We have built our decorating ideas around six basic colors, although there are hundreds of possible variations. Carefully compiled and understandable charts show you, at a glance, the beauty of harmonizing walls, draperies, floor-coverings, and upholstery fabrics.

We prove what we preach—by decorating three rooms, living room, dining room and bedroom, in the same basic color schemes as the charts. Three typically livable rooms to show you how channing your own home can look, and incidentally how far your money can go—complete in every detail to lamps, linens, china and bedding.

We "see" your room—With the aid of graphed sheets you "show us" your rooms, their size, window and door placements—we suggest furniture arrangements. It saves so much of your time—and you can be certain of a smart effect.

Furnishings are wisely chosen—Every piece of furniture, china, bedding, has been chosen with a purpose—with an eye to beauty, harmony, appropriateness and price.

The Deferred Payment Plan—provides individualized uniform monthly payments suited to your purse—and at a very slight additional charge for the convenience.

Cummings Quits Cabinet In January

Resign

Confirming reports the head of the Department of Justice was to sever his connection with the Government, the President said it was an old story. He declared that in 1933, when Cummings was appointed he was very loath to remain here more than two years, but the President repeatedly had been able to persuade him to continue his service. Last July, newsmen were informed, Cummings finally told the President he must get back to his Connecticut home and was asked to wait until October. Now, Mr. Roosevelt said, it has been agreed that the Attorney General may depart some time in January, after Congress assembles.

The only other changes in the Cabinet, as it was constituted at the beginning of the Administration, have been those occasioned by the illness and subsequent death of Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin, and the death of Secretary of War George H. Dern.

The President expressed regret at Cummings' decision to quit, saying he felt the Department of Justice in the past five years has accomplished extraordinary results, not only in the improvement of methods of handling cases but also in undertaking such necessary tasks as curbing interstate crime.

The Nation now has, he continued, a system of detection of interstate crime probably as good as any in the world. Progress had been made as well, he said, in the matter of penology, in the handling of prisoners. On the whole, he concluded, he felt the Attorney General had done a remarkable piece of work.

Asked about reports that Secretary of Commerce Daniel W. Roper contemplated quitting, Mr. Roosevelt said there were no other resignations and no thought of filling places yet.

Resignation rumors in the Capital also have mentioned Secretary of the Navy Swanson, Secretary of War Woodring and Postmaster General Farley.

Walsh's Death Caused Switch

Cummings, now 69, originally was slated for the post of Governor General of the Philippines, but the sudden death of Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who was to have become Attorney General, caused a switch in the plans. Cummings was an active supporter of Mr. Roosevelt for the Presidential nomination in 1932.

Tonight's program will consist of three ballets new to Washington. One of them, Massine's choregraphic version of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, will be conducted by Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra. The other two, "L'Epreuve d'Amour," with music by Mozart and choregraphy by Fokine, and "Gaite Parisienne," with music by Offenbach and choregraphy, including the famous "can-can" episode by Massine, will be conducted by Anatol Fistoulari, associate conductor of the Ballet Russe.

Tomorrow night's program will feature Hindemith's new ballet, "St. Francis," with Massine's choregraphy, hailed at its first performance in London as the most important dance event since the premiere of Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps" in 1913. Other ballets to be seen tomorrow night include "Swan Lake" and "Le Beau Danube."

Tickets for both performances are on sale at the National Symphony box office, Julius Garfinckel & Co. store, Fourteenth and F streets northwest. The Constitution Hall box office opens at 7 p. m.

97 Men, Firms Indicted as Milk Trust

Chicago Officials Named
D. C. Residents Involved
12,000 Farmers Hit

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Ninety-seven officials and organizations charged with violating antitrust laws in the milk and ice cream industries marshalled their forces for a finish fight tonight.

Shortly after two Federal grand jury indictments had been made public, the defendants and their attorneys started a parade to the courthouse to post bond of $1,000 each as the first step in a legal battle against the latest move in the Government's extensive drive against alleged monopolies.

City officials, business executives and labor leaders were among the 43 individuals and 14 firms and associations named in the milk bill. Twenty men and 20 groups were accused in the ice cream complaint.

Ten Companies Named

Those indicted on charges of conspiring to fix prices, suppress independent competition and control the supply of milk in the important Chicago area included:

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, nationally known president of the Chicago Board of Health, and two aides.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, ace investigator for State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney.

Ten milk distributors, including the Borden Co., and Borden-Weiland, Inc., with headquarters in New York, and the Bowman Dairy Co., of Chicago, and 21 officials of the 10 concerns.

12,000 Farmers Affected

Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., bargaining agency of the major distributors here, and 10 of its officers.

The Pure Milk Association, sales and bargaining agency for more than 12,000 member dairy farmers in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, and six men who were on its executive staff when the investigation was made. These included Don N. Geyer, now of Boston, former general manager, and John P. Case, Naperville, Ill., former president.

The Milk Wagon Drivers Union and seven of its officers, and L. G. Goudie, head of Joint Council No. 25 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

D. C. Men Involved

Among those accused of entering a conspiracy of Nation-wide proportions to restrain sale of counter freezers—used in retail stores, hospitals, restaurants and other places for making ice cream on their premises—were:

The National Dairy Products Corporation and the Borden Co. of New York and 16 other ice cream manufacturing firms, including the Hendler Creamery Co., Baltimore, subsidiary of Borden, and Carry Ice Cream Co., Washington, subsidiary of the Beatrice Creamery Co. of Chicago.

The International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers with headquarters in Washington, and 19 officials and former officials, including Robert C. Hibben, Washington, executive secretary; L. Manuel Hendler, Baltimore, executive committeeman and president of Hendler Creamery, and Ernest H. Daniel, Washington, treasurer and president of Carry Ice Cream Co.

Dr. Bundesen Takes Leave

Dr. Bundesen, asserting he knew nothing of any conspiracy, took leave of absence to combat the charges. Mayor Edward J. Kelly lauded him as "an efficient health officer."

State's Attorney Courtney, declaring he had the "utmost confidence" in Gilbert's integrity, announced he would not permit him to resign.

"There is no justification for any charges against us," stated Thomas H. McInnerney, president of the National Dairy Products Corporation. "We are determined to fight these charges vigorously, confident that our business and executives will be completely vindicated.'

Other defendants issued similar statements.

They will be given three days to post bonds. District Attorney Michael L. Igoe said he expected all to be arraigned in about three weeks.

U. S. Planting Cut One-Third

Surpluses Are Cause Reduction Voluntary Spurred by Bonuses

By the Associated Press.

American farmers must plant no more than 275,000,000 of their 365,000,000 cultivated acres to cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco, rice and other "soil depleting" crops next year if they are to obtain $712,000,000 in subsidy payments authorized by Congress.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace established this national planting goal yesterday for the 1939 agricultural adjustment programs, designed to prevent accumulation of crop surpluses. This year's goal was about 282,500,000 acres.

Quota Not Compulsory

The secretary said 275,000,000 acres should produce sufficient crops to supply the Nation's domestic requirements and "all possible export markets" and provide an adequate reserve.

The 1939 goal will be divided among various crops and then allotted to farmers. Growers may comply with, or ignore, their allotments, but in order to be eligible for maximum subsidy payments they must comply. In addition, they must plant land diverted from soil-depleting crops to those classed as soil-building, such as clover, alfalfa, other legumes and pasture crops.

Except for wheat, peanuts and certain types of tobacco, the planting goals for major crops will be about the same as this year. The wheat goal was established at 55,000,000 acres, compared with 62,500,000 last year. The large reduction was made because of this year's surplus-producing crop, harvested from a seeded acreage of 80,000,000.

Cotton Acreage Cut

The cotton goal was fixed at between 27,000,000 and 29,000,000 acres, compared with a normal cotton acreage of about 40,000,000. There is a near-record surplus of cotton.

Slight increases in peanut and flue-cured tobacco acreage goals were established.

The department's planting program may be supplemented by marketing regulations under which growers will be assessed penalty taxes if they sell in excess of individual quotas. Cotton tobacco and rice growers will vote December 10 on a proposal to invoke these regulations. They must be approved by two-thirds of those voting before they can be established.

Phillips Here To Regain Aid For Oklahoma

Gov.-elect Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma promised the voters who lifted him into the gubernatorial chair a week ago Tuesday that he would bring old-age pensions back to them. He is in Washington today to see what can be done about his promise.

Federal aid was withdrawn from his State last March on grounds it had failed to comply with the social security act.

"I'm trying to find out why the old people in Oklahoma are not being paid their pensions and what I can do about it," he said. Ed McDonald, manager of social security for the region which includes Oklahoma, accompanied him to offices of the Social Security Board.

While in Washington, the new Governor—a Democrat who defeated a Democratic incumbent—will visit other national offices "to get a line on the set-up." He probably will be here three or four days.

At the hearings which resulted in the withdrawal of Federal funds from Oklahoma evidence was produced to show old-age checks had gone to dead men and that a large percentage of beneficiaries appeared ineligible for the checks, while hundreds of eligible persons received no assistance.

When efforts were made to have the grants restored in May, the Social Security Board declared the Oklahoma welfare commission must show "that the plans under which it is operating are in substantial compliance with the social security act before we have power to make a grant."

Amazing Results Reported In Medically-Supervised Clinical Tests—Sickness from Colds Actually Cut More Than Half!

A SIMPLE GUIDE ANY MOTHER CAN EASILY FOLLOW

Wouldn't it be wonderful to know about a way that helped thousands of people to escape many colds with all their discomforts and dangers? A way that sharply reduced the number and length of colds, that cut sickness from colds 50.88%, that reduced children's school absences due to colds even more—57.86%!

These are actual figures—not taken from just a few experiences—but from a great series of clinical tests in which more than 17,000 men, women and children took part. 37 doctors were on the supervisory staff. More than 500 supervisors and nurses assisted them. This great clinic, by sharply reducing the number and length of colds and the distress that comes with them, proved the worth of Vicks Plan.

Vicks Plan is a simple guide which emphasizes the importance of proper personal care and the use of two specialized medications for relief of symptoms in different types and stages of colds—Vicks Va-tro-nol and Vicks VapoRub. When colds threatened—at the first sniffle or sneeze—Va-tro-nol was used to help prevent many a cold from developing. When a cold got by all precautions, VapoRub was used to relieve its discomforts.

The results speak for themselves. Vicks Plan may do less for you—or it may do even more. But with such a record it certainly is worth a trial. It is easy to follow in your own home. You get full directions in every package of Va-tro-nol or VapoRub.

To Help PREVENT Many Colds

Va-tro-nol is specialized medication—expressly designed for use in the nose and upper throat, where 3 out of 4 colds start. You can feel its tingling, stimulating medication go right to work to aid Nature's own defenses against colds. Used at the very first warning nasal irritation, sniffle, or sneeze—a few drops up each nostril—Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds from developing. So keep it handy and use it early. VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

To EASE Discomfort of Colds

VapoRub is the standby of most mothers the country over for relieving misery of colds. Massaged on throat, chest, and back, VapoRub works two ways at once: (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Its medicated vapors are inhaled direct to irritated air-passages. This double action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion—and you soon feel comfortable again. VICKS VAPORUB

★ DYNAFLASH VALVE-IN-HEAD STRAIGHT-EIGHT ENGINE ★ BUICOIL TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING ★ GREATER VISIBILITY ★ HANDSHIFT TRANSMISSION ★ ROOMIER UNISTEEL BODY BY FISHER ★ TORQUE-TUBE DRIVE ★ TIPTOE HYDRAULIC BRAKES ★ CROWN SPRING CLUTCH ★ "CATWALK-COOLING" ★ OPTIONAL REAR AXLE GEAR RATIOS ★ FLASH-WAY DIRECTION SIGNAL ★ SELF-RANKING KNEE-ACTION FRONT SPRINGING

JUST FLIP A SWITCH with the new Flash-Way signal to tell following cars which way you're going to turn. Shows day or night, operates from a small lever on gearshift, looks like a neat monogram when not in use. Standard on all models.

Scenery begins to mean something more than just a view of the tree-tops.

You've got a front-porch view of the whole wide world—that sitting-in-a-bathtub feeling's gone!

And that's just one of the things we were after when we planned this sensational new Buick. Better aerodynamics was another. So was the highly effective "catwalk-cooling" practiced on Europe's high-speed racing cars.

It's because our designers achieved these without straining for effect or seeking freakish fashion that the new Buick's the beauty it so patently is.

A beauty to look upon—a beauty to look out of.

A beauty to handle—a beauty to own.

A beauty to depend on—a beauty to have fun with—a beauty to deliver durably and thriftily the fleetly flowing miles!

There are scores of other advances in this marvelous new car—a gearshift out of kneeway, the true "full float" BuiCoil Springing ride, the quick and quiet Dynaflash straight-eight engine that is this Buick's mighty heart.

We can't begin to list them all—but your Buick dealer can do better than that. He can show them to you—show you what they'll do. And that's what smart buyers will want to know this year.

GENTLING EVERY JAR, BuiCoil Torque-Free Springing is this year even softer, smoother...still a vital safety factor. It reduces skid risks and makes rear tires last longer.

ABLEST OF THE EIGHTS is this mighty Buick Dynaflash Valve-in-Head Straight-Eight, with a cyclone in each cylinder to squeeze full power from every drop of fuel.

Easy on the eye—easy to buy—on General Motors Terms!

"Better buy Buick the Beauty!"

Park and approved its requests for funds to launch the project.

Despite the President's indorsement, Congress killed the application for $500,000 in 1937 but the second attempt to have the item included in an appropriation bill succeeded last June.

In February, 1937, when the controversy over selection of the Tidal Basin site was in its early stages, the President joined in the arguments for the first time when he indicated that the monument should be nonutilitarian in character rather as a museum, planetarium, stadium or the like.

Plan Scaled Down

Nevertheless, he is believed to have been influential in having the pretentious plan, prepared by John Russell Pope and originally approved by the Boylan commission, scaled down to simpler proportions.

It was on January 12 of this year that the President conferred with Representatives Smith, Virginia, and Nichols, Oklahoma, the former a member of the memorial commission, on a more modest scheme for the monument. Less than three months later the commission had approved the new plan, which is the one about to be carried out.

Boylan said at that time that it would not necessitate the destruction of any cherry trees and, in contrast to the original plan, would alter the contour of the Tidal Basin only slightly.

Basin Plan Likely

Although the three Senate members of the memorial group—McNary, Lonergan and Thomas, of Utah—were opponents of the Tidal Basin site and several others were content to abide by Boylan's wishes, the chairman's death probably will give impetus to the plans to build at the basin, Delano predicted.

Representative Boylan wanted the memorial to be built on the cross axis of the Mall, on a line with the White House and Washington Monument, and his friends in Congress will seek to fulfill that wish, the planning commission chairman believes.

One of the most aggressive objectors to the West Potomac Park site has been the American Planning and Civic Association, of which Delano is chairman of the board and a past president.

May Delay Contract

No drastic changes are expected to be suggested by Mr. Roosevelt on Friday. It is not unlikely, however, that he may recommend to the commission that it defer the award of the foundation contract until Congress convenes next month.

Two vacancies exist on the body, and there will be three when Congress meets. The Speaker of the House will name the successor to Representative Boylan and the Vice President will appoint the successor to Senator Augustine Lonergan (Democrat), of Connecticut, who was defeated for re-election.

Also unfilled is the post which was held by the late Hollins S. Randolph, one of the three representatives of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., District Engineer Commissioner and an ex-officio member of the planning body, said yesterday that he is confident no effort will be spared to save as many trees as possible and to replace all those which have to be removed.

outside work" and lately finished a term in Atlanta for shooting a bootlegger, now and then exchanged comments with the lawyers for the three, Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connor.

Post Readers Excused

The venires from all three criminal courts, totaling 76, crowded the courtroom as the trial began. After general questions concerning newspaper attention given the case, counsel gathered at the bench. Justice Laws then asked whether any veniremen read the Warring trial story in The Washington Post Monday morning.

Thirteen of the panel promptly rose. Justice Laws excused them from jury service without further questions. As a matter of law, the court ruled, the article was so extensive and revealing that those who read it were disqualified.

Attorneys said they believed the ruling was without a precedent. Justice Laws commented in recess that he had no adverse criticism to make of the article, but that he had wished to take every precaution to obtain an unbiased jury.

Assistant District Attorney Wilson then examined the jurors for acquaintances of Sam Beard, who once ruled the gambling racket here; "Jewboy Dietz" and Mickey McDonald, also linked to the gambling setup, and Jimmy LaFontaine, known as the gambling ruler of Prince Georges County. One man who said he knew Beard was excused.

Justice Laws repeatedly refused to excuse veniremen, at defense requests, because they were related to Government employes. Exceptions were noted in each instance.

Voir dire examination was completed at 2:30 p. m. About 40 persons had been excused for cause. In the next hour the Government used seven of its ten challenges and the defense used nine of its ten to get rid of jurors to whom they objected but against whom no cause could be shown.

Pine began his opening statement at 3:30 p. m. He said the conspiracy the Government would prove had been a continuing one, with the object of hiding the Warrings' huge profits so as to get out of paying income taxes on them.

Expenditures Cited

When the Warrings began their operations, Pine said, they had no money, except $2,400. The Government, he said, would prove that nevertheless, in the years 1934, 1935 and 1936 they spent millions on the expenses of the numbers racket. Thousands, Pine added, they spent on themselves, and the numbers game was the source of this wealth.

Court was suspended a few minutes, when a colored spectator, Allen Williams, fainted.

Pine said the Warrings began to keep books in July, 1934, and that Emmitt alone declared an income that year, $10,000. Yet their books showed $13,000 and their expenditures showed $28,000, Pine added.

The next year all three filed identical returns of $1,860 each, Pine said, but the Government will prove the total was $85,000. He said 1936 was another $2,000,000 year for the numbers racket, but that the gang reported its total income as only $57,000. He said the Government will prove the Warrings took $121,000 each out of the business that year.

Covering up their profits, he said, were false entries in the books.

Counseling in this bookkeeping, Pine said, was Sadur, who once fixed the returns to cover a $250 a week "protection" item.

All the defense counsel reserved their opening addresses, when Pine concluded. The Government will start calling its witnesses today. Internal revenue agents who investigated the Warrings will be among the first witnesses.

Congressmen, Churches Join Protest on Jews

Envoy's Recall Praised
Ashurst for Break
Nazi Ships Guarded

By the Associated Press.

Commendation of the summons of the United States Ambassador from Germany for "report and consultation" was mixed last night with added denunciation of the Nazi anti-Semitic campaign and new requests to President Roosevelt to register this country's protests with the Reich.

"If the technical recall of Ambassador Hugh Wilson . . . is intended as a protest and remonstrance against racial and religious persecution . . ., it deserves the wholehearted approval of the American people regardless of party affiliations," said Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Church Groups Approve

The executive committee of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, the Associated Church Press and the Young Men's Board of Trade of New York likewise voiced approval of the action of the President and Secretary of State.

Urging the Government to "officially protest the barbarism in Germany," the Workers Defense League, organization of unemployed, also proposed that immigration laws be relaxed "to admit all refugees from Nazi Germany who apply for entry into this country."

The National Negro Congress made a similar request to President Roosevelt.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said persecution of Jews in Germany is "outrageous, inhuman, indefensible and incomprehensible."

Severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany was suggested by Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, who described Reichsfuehrer Hitler as a "madman."

Women's Groups Appeal

Another expression favoring severance of relations came from the Associated Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations of New England.

Other protests, made public by the National Council of Women of the United States, included statements from Ruth Haller Ottaway, president of the National Council; Authors Ida M. Tarbell and Mary Heaton Vorse, Daisy June Trout, president of the National Council of Federated Church Women; Hannah Clothier Hull, president of the International League for Peace and Freedom, and Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women.

The Georgia Baptist convention, representing 481,000 members, petitioned Secretary Hull "to take urgent measures."

New York's City Council adopted unanimously a resolution sponsored by every member, protesting the German "reign of terror."

More than 100 uniformed police and 60 detectives were assigned to the North German Lloyd Line pier in New York from which the S. S. Bremen was due to sail at midnight.

Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine said the State Department had asked that German ships and the German consulate be protected.

might damage present trade relations with any European nation.

Canada, alive to empire obligations and restrictions, was slow to react. Prime Minister Mackenzie King said, "I am afraid al comments on defense must be reserved for Parliament."

German newspapers this morning pointedly ignored Roosevelt's statements and uniformly devoted their front pages to a compilation of reports from throughout the world designed to show that Jews are wanted nowhere. Caustic comment on Roosevelt's statements was expected later, however, in view of Nazi press attacks on the United States yesterday and blunt warnings that active sympathy abroad would result in still more anti-Jewish measures.

said in a dispatch from The Hague.

[Official Nazi spokesmen in Berlin informed of the plan to move most of Germany's 600,000 remaining Jews to new lands, commented, "Fine, let the mget on with it. The more the better."—Editor's Note.]

Again, the Netherlands make take the initiative by facilitating Jewish immigration into the Dutch East Indies, which have become rather vulnerable with the growth of Japanese-German-Italian axis.

The main hope of the Jews must rest with the United States, Britain and France. From the latter two countries, the Germans have been demanding the return of their old colonies—Tanganyika, Southwest Africa, the Cameroons and Togoland. Reichsfurher Hitler's current drive against the Jews may have the unexpected effect of expediting Jewish immigration to the former colonies of the Reich. Rhodesia and Madagascar also are mentioned as British and French possessions which could stand more population.

In some of the former colonies of the Kaiser, the German population is still in the majority over the British, and is agitating for reunion with the Reich. Jews, fleeing from the Nazi terror in Europe, could be counted upon to resist Nazi agitation in Africa.

The wholesale persecution of Jews in Germany has seriously embarrassed and perhaps destroyed Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of appeasement with Germany, based upon the peace of Munich which sacrificed Czechoslovakia. As the next step in that program for purchasing peace, Chamberlain felt that Britain and France should restore to Germany some of her old colonies.

Oswald Pirow, the South African defense minister, came to London and talked over colonial transfers with Chamberlain, Lord Halifax and King George VI. Later this week he is to proceed to Germany to visit Hitler. He will take along a warning that British opinion at this moment is strongly against any cession of territory and natives, black or white, to a Germany which is persecuting its minority population at home, the Jews.

According to tomorrow's Daily Mail, Pirow will take to Berlin a plan, under which he will offer Hitler new colonies instead of returning the Kaiser's old ones.

The new colonies, according to the paper, would be composed of a bit of Anglo-French Cameroons, a slice of Portuguese Angola and a part of the Belgian Congo. These would lie together and, besides having an excellent coast, would have a rich and varied hinterland sparsely populated by bush natives. Watered, fertile and virgin—here is a rich slice of the tropics which, if properly developed, would produce raw materials in abundance for Germany, Pirow will argue.

Pirow also was reported taking along a project whereby Germany could obtain raw materials from a common colonial pool administered jointly by an international board, representative of all the countries with a stake in Africa, including the Reich.

The Mail added Pirow would ask Hitler to agree to an international discussion of colonies. If Hitler's price should prove reasonable, Pirow's next job would be to persuade Belgium and France to agree to such a conference. Portugal, which he visited recently, was reported to have agreed without prejudice to talk things over around a table.

[The colonial committee of the French Chamber of Deputies asked that the government make no decision and that no talks be held concerning the colonial problem without consultation of Parliament, the Associated Press said.

[The French foreign office spokesman pointed to widespread expression of the opinion that France was against relinquishing any colonies.—Editor's Note.]

Rather than risk the downfall of his government, Chamberlain must bury his appeasement policy or at least put it in cold storage until Berlin behaves. Tomorrow's cabinet meeting is expected to reconsider its attitude regarding a com- opinion in both countries resents pulsory national register and a ministry of supply to speed up Britain's preparations for war. Chamberlain has been disposed to hold off on these measures rather than offend the easily irritated Fuehrer. But now relations between London and Berlin have been strained to the point where the much advertised "peace in our time" looks like a mirage.

Unless Chamberlain takes a firmer stand against Germany and arms accordingly, he may be defeated, not so much by the opposition Labor and Liberal parties, as by a revolt among his own supporters led by Anthony Eden, Winston Churchill and Alfred Duff-Cooper, whose anti-Nazi position has been glorified by the events of the past week.

Eden, in his shrewd boring-from-within tactics against the present leadership of the government, is said to enjoy the advice of that past master of political strategy, Earl Baldwin. Several cabinet ministers are reported siding with Eden against Chamberlain in the former's propaganda for a policy of "national unity" to expedite rearmament.

There is an inclination in and out of government circles to suspect the Jewish program of advancing a terrific internal economic crisis in Germany. Therefore, it is argued, the government should forget about appeasement and colonies in the hope that Germany's forced draft economic system will collapse of its own defects.

Again there is talk in the English press that President Roosevelt is about to make an important pronouncement on the Jewish question. There is talk also of a joint Anglo-American diplomatic gesture to impress upon Hitler how public the maltreatment of the Jews.

However, Downing Street appears to be fighting shy of any sort of gesture toward Berlin, on the assumption that it only action, not words, can help the situation, just as sympathy is not enough for homeless Jews, so are paper sermons regarded as insufficient to convert the Nazis.

President Roosevelt's recall of his Ambassador in Berlin has been noted here with interest, but the example is not likely to be followed. To recall the British Ambassador from Berlin would indeed be a strong gesture, but it is reasoned this would not assist the Jews or solve their hardships. It is feared that angry notes might merely stiffen the Nazi backs, and that a counteroffensive of abuse in the British press would play into Germany's hands and whip up the Nazis own press dogs.

Leaders of the Jewish community in Great Britain joined in an appeal for millions of pounds to finance the transfer of Jews from Germany.

Chamberlain tonight received a deputation of Jewish leaders, including Viscount Samuels, Viscount Bearsted, Neville Laski, Lionel de Rothschild, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, and the chief Rabbi, Dr. Joseph Herman Hertz together with Lord Reading, Simon Marks and Leonard Montefiore they had signed an appeal reading:

"Great sums have already been raised by the Jewish communities here and abroad and largely by their help about 200,000 have migrated to every part of the world, including Palestine. These resources are exhausted now when the need has become greatest. Large amounts running into millions must be found. Since we know that many members of other communities, out of the fullness of their sympathy, desire to assist, our appeal for the first time is extended to all men and women who feel the call of a common humanity."

YOUR BUSY LIFE LETS DOWN THE BARS TO NERVE STRAIN

BOSTON TERRIER—A cross between the English bulldog and white English terrier, but this gentle, lovable house pet is strictly an American product. First bred in Boston some 60 years ago. Once called the "Roundhead," today he is the "American Gentleman" of dogdom. The phrase "Boston terrier expression" has become almost a synonym for intelligence in dogs.

HE'S GIVING HIS NERVES A REST...

AND SO IS HE

ARE these busy, trying days for you? Do you find yourself, at day's end, irritable, nerve-weary? Take a moment—study the dog above. He's resting his nerves. Even in the midst of strenuous action he will stop, relax. The dog does that instinctively, though his nerves are complex, high-keyed like our own.

We, trained for the intense stress of modern life, are likely to ignore the distress signals of our nerves—the instinctive urge to rest. So often, we let our will-power drive us on at a task, hour after hour, heedless of nerve tension.

You don't want your nervous system to be a drag. See what a difference it makes when you rest your nerves frequently—when you LET UP—LIGHT UP A CAMEL. Enjoy the mellow goodness, the mildness of Camel's rich, ripe tobaccos. Smokers say Camel's costlier tobaccos are so soothing to the nerves.

C. U. Arranges Radio Attack On Pogrom

3 Bishops Will Talk Also Al Smith On Networks Tonight

Five nationally prominent Catholics will denounce German persecution of Jews in a coast-to-coast broadcast at 9 p. m. tonight arranged by the Catholic University of America.

The Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the university's religious education department, last night announced the broadcast as an opportunity for certain Catholic groups to express their disapproval of the inhuman treatment given Jews in the Reich.

C. U. Head Will Speak

While the program will originate in Washington, speakers will talk from various parts of the country through facilities of the Columbia and National Broadcasting companies.

Speakers will be the Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University; former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York; Archbishop John J. Mitty, of San Francisco; Bishop Peter S. Ireton, of Richmond, and Bishop John M. Gannon, of Erie, Pa.

Time Too Short for Others

Bishop Mitty is a former war chaplain and is president of the Catholic Chaplains' Aid Association and a former member of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Council.

Bishop Gannon is chairman of the press department of the National Catholic Welfare Council, and Bishop Ireton is secretary of the board of trustees of Catholic University.

"As evidenced in the speech of the Most. Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, on Sunday, there are many Catholic clergymen and laymen throughout the country who are anxious to condemn the German actions," Dr. Sheehy said.

Archbishop Curley called Hitler a "madman" and Propaganda Minister Goebbels "crippled-minded," and predicted failure of the persecutions.

The eagerness of Catholics to protest follows strong condemnation of German atrocities from Pope Pius XI, Dr. Sheehy said. The half-hour time limit prevents other leaders from speaking, he added.

Mgr. Corrigan and Dr. Sheehy, who will introduce the speakers, will talk from the music hall on the campus of Catholic University. Archbishop Mitty will speak from San Francisco, Bishop Ireton from Baltimore, Bishop Gannon from Cleveland, and Smith from New York.

New York Council Protests Terror

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—A resolution requesting President Roosevelt to "declare his condemnation of the barbaric acts" against Jewish and Catholic minorities in Germany was passed yesterday by the Board of Estimate, a branch of the city government.

The resolution, introduced by Newbold Morris, president of the city council, at Mayor LaGuardia's request, expressed the board's "profound horror at the bestial attacks upon the helpless minorities of Germany."

Morris said he would study the board's rules concerning the purchase of foreign-made goods by the city with a view to possible barring of purchase of German-made merchandise.

ously at notes to obtain every phrase.

The President finished and laid the paper down.

There was no dramatization, in an event filled with drama. Reporters were assured there would be mimeographed copies of the statement for all.

A few minor questions. None of the customary levity.

Then a query as to the status of the expanded defense program, and the President, relaxing none from the earnestness that marked the conference, told in a matter-of-fact way of the new conception of national defense, so broadened by reason of events overseas that it now had become a matter of continental defense.

Again anticipating questions, he said he was to lose a member of his official family—Attorney General Cummings was to resign, and that his son, James, recuperating from a stomach operation, had resigned as his secretary because the doctors didn't want him to return to Washington before spring.

Would he or Secretary Hull sign the new British trade agreement?

He thought, after a pause, that that was a duty of the Secretary of State.

"What day, Mr. President?"

Then the nearest to levity of the entire conference. The President caught himself before answering and asked if the day had been announced by the War Department. Learning it had not, he refused to be trapped into giving away the secret.

That was the end of the news, but not in years has so much come out of a 30-minute talk between Mr. Roosevelt and those who seek to keep the world informed of his every action.

That the President knew it was to become a gripping session for those who heard him was apparent as the reporters gathered.

The Roosevelt smile of lightheartedness was not there, and if at times there were flashes of it, they were faint and passed without an impression.

Waiting for the last of the auditor-questioners to find standing room so they might hear, though not see him, the President chatted idly in subdued manner with those closest to him. He gazed at the ceiling, as the smoke from his cigarette, the only one permitted in the room, rose straight upward.

There was none of the joking and hearty laughter that usually accompanies preconference small talk about amusing incidents on recent Presidential trips, in which both the President and the White House regulars have shared. Mr. Roosevelt had a real conference ahead for the correspondents, but he alone, apparently realized what a real one it was to be.

His gaze wandered to the paper on his desk from which he was to give the reporters the most cutting criticism of people of another country that has come from a President perhaps since the war era.

He appeared eager to get to the business at hand and utter the words that, within a matter of minutes would be raging around the world to create, doubtless, profound impression in the capitals of the great powers.

His mood spread contagiously to those about him and silence settled over them as he read his statement and discoursed over the new defense aims. Jocular questions were forgotten, if any had been prepared.

And when the final question was asked, and not answered, there came the customary:

"Thank you, Mr. President."

Quietly, without the usual jesting and back-slapping, 200 men and women filed out, conscious, all, of the deep, dramatic, probably historic nature of the conference they had experienced.

Roosevelt Calls Nazi War on Jews Incredible adding that the time was not ripe for such details.

No Change in Quotas

He said he had not reviewed the problem of destruction of American-owned property in the Nazi persecutions.

Asked if he planned legislation raising immigration quotas to care for the ousted Jews, the President said he did not contemplate relaxation of the restrictions.

The President's rarely adopted procedure of permitting direct quotation of the statement intensified its bluntness. The statement was the latest of a series of disagreements between the two countries, since this country has long been at direct odds with the German bilateral barter policy in international commerce.

Before the Munich peace settlement the United States had shown displeasure over the seizure of Austria by the Germans and demanded at that time an assumption by the Nazi government of responsibility for Austria's debts to this country. No response has ever been made to this demand.

The two appeals by President Roosevelt to Chancellor Hitler during the Czechoslovak crisis of September were also recalled last night, as well as the increasing concern here over the swift and steady penetration of the Nazis into American markets in South and Central America.

Trade at Low Ebb

American commerce with Germany is near the lowest in history. Since the 1933 inception of Hitler's barter policy of trade, a thoroughgoing isolation policy exactly countering the "Good Neighbor" and reciprocal trade agreement policies of this Administration, trade relations have steadily declined. The ban on unfavorable foreign exchange forced German merchants to seek other outlets for their goods and brought about the concentration on South America, where Germany has in many cases passed British trade figures and now rivals the United States in some regions.

Repeated incidents, from the German protest at the time New York's Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, suggested that Hitler be represented in a "Chamber of Horrors" at the New York 1939 World's Fair, down through the organization of the international refugee committee, who demonstrated clearly the conflict between Nazi ideology and American thought, observers noted.

Secretary Hull said yesterday he did not know how long Ambasssador Wilson would remain in this country, but smiled when asked if Wilson would stay after the Christmas holidays. He disclaimed knowledge of London reports that the British and American governments were planning joint steps to aid German Jews in addition to the help offered by the international refugee committee.

It was indicated that any American protest to Berlin could only be based on destruction of American property.

Vienna Nazis Deny Censoring Priests

Vienna, Nov. 15 (AP).—A government spokesman tonight denied archdiocesan officials of the Catholic Church had been ordered to submit their sermons to censorship.

Earlier authoritative sources had said that church authorities appealed against an order directing submission of all sermons and public announcements to the government before delivery and that sale of Catholic leaflets at the church doors on Sundays had been forbidden.

bade farewell to Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

German authorities informed the American consulate that, if the United States will give visas to Jews under arrest, they will be released from prisons and concentration camps and permitted to leave the Reich.

In cases where "immigration facilities for the arrested person are assured, his release will be ordered," the United States consulate was told.

The Nazi assurance was believed to apply only to those Jews whose visa applications are in order and who can be assured of emigrating in the near future.

It was estimated that 50,000 Jews have been arrested in Germany in the last few days, nearly 8,000 in Berlin, many of them influential and wealthy Jews held as hostages.

Among the "hostages," held pending Hitler's complete settlement of the Jewish question, are such men as Fritz Warburg, Hamburg banker and brother of the late Felix and Paul Warburg, American financiers.

"Woe to the Jews!"

"We shall use Jewish hostages systematically, no matter how shocking some people may find it," the newspaper, Das Schwarze Korps, official organ of the S. S. Guards, announced.

"Woe to the Jews if another helper is paid or incited by them and raises his murderous hand against a German. Not one will answer for a murdered or wounded German, but all!"

The Jewish principle of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" will be elaborated upon, the stormtroop organ said, and the Nazis will take a thousand eyes and a thousand teeth for every German eye or tooth.

"Washington Politicians"

To this the afternoon newspaper Zwolfuhrblat" added:

"Apostles of humanitarianism and the purposeful politicians of Washington—how could they be otherwise—are panic-stricken over the clean division of Germans and Jews effected in Germany.

"They hammer and curse with such effect that soon it might be too much for us. This Washington should let itself be told or has one failed correctly to understand Dr. Goebbels' words that any new campaign will be a bad service to the Jews of Germany?

"If so, then it should be repeated as a warning which should not be taken lightly, for it is meant seriously."

Britain, like the United States, came in for a heavy share of the violent press attacks and newspapers referred bitterly to British "atrocities" in India, Palestine and South Africa.

Das Schwarze Korps also denounced Germans who express sympathy for the Jews, saying:

"What they and their congenital original teachers, the Jews, deserve is a good punch on the nose We must tell them that the hour in which 'we will muzzle you' has come. We know that beyond the hypicritical mask of your good will, mildness and phrase-ridden humanitarianism nothing is hidden except the bestial cruelty of anaemic cowards."

The "Zwoelfuhrblott, in a red ink headline, hammered at Britain's reaction to the anti-Semitic measures.

"Newspapers in London expressed horror at the fact that Germanw had effected atonement for the Jewish murder of a German diplomat," it said: "In connection with it the term 'barbarous methods' was used. We are accustomed to such impertinences, which emanate chiefly from Anglo-Sax countries which defend freedom of expression even when it becomes lawlessness. If England wants a discussion of humanitarianism we cite a few examples."

Speaks of "Atrocities"

The newspaper then spoke of alleged British "atrocities" in India, Palestine and South Africa.

German authorities, suppressing all news of foreign indignation in the Nazi press, continued the anti-Jewish measures without regard to world-wide protests.

Foreign diplomatic circles expressed belief in view of this, that Ambassador Wilson soon would return to Berlin.

Panic-stricken Jews in increasing numbers besieged the American and other foreign consulates, seeking means of escaping from Germany.

Jews released from concentration camps—usually only because they had been promised visas for emigration—reported that conditions in the camps were "so terrible we don't talk about them."

Jews did not expect decrees aimed at cultural and economic limitations to end with their banishment from German schools and universities. More decrees along this line were expected as soon as the Nazis find new opportunities to detach Jewish and German economic and cultural life by the establishment of ghettos.

Goering Angry at Riots

[Marshal] Hermann Wilhelm Goering, "No. 2 man" of Germany, was reported in reliable quarters to have been moved to anger by last week's wave of anti-Semitic violence, a reaction suggesting a difference with Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, according to the Associated Press.

[Goebbels said he approved "inwardly" of the mob violence. Goering, on the other hand, now finds last week's destruction to be the worst set-back he has yet received for his cherished four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency.—Editor's note.]

Beware The Cough
From a common cold
That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements found in many cough remedies, such as Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, and fluid extract of Licorice Root, but it also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect, and most important of all, Beechwood Creosote nicely blended with all of these so that it will reach the source of the trouble from the inside.

Thousands of people, who really know their drugs, use Creomulsion in their own families, realizing that this excellent preparation aids nature to soothe the inflamed mucous membranes, to heal the irritated tissues, and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion "tops" for coughs because in it you get a good dose of Creosote emulsified so that it is palatable, and may be taken frequently by both adults and children with remarkable results.

Creomulsion is generally found satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritation, especially those stubborn ones due to common colds that hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Don't worry through another sleepless night—use Creomulsion. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained.

Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product, and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Slamming The Door

Within a few hours after President Roosevelt's message had been read to the C. I. O. that organization slammed shut the door which he had asked it to keep open. John L. Lewis had promised "earnest and profound consideration" of the President's message. Instead, snap judgment resulted in reaffirmation of the C. I. O.'s no compromise attitude.

The convention at Pittsburgh rendered brief lip service to the cause of labor unity. But this part of its resolution was meaningless, for it was coupled with a refusal to make any concessions in the interest of peace with the A. F. of L. Every one realizes that an adjustment of differences between these rival labor camps is impossible unless each is willing to make some sacrifice in the interests of the entire organized labor movement.

Most impartial observers hold Mr. Lewis chiefly responsible for the breakdown in the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. negotiations last year in spite of the report presented to the Pittsburgh convention by Philip Murray. The uncompromising attitude now assumed is merely an extension of the policy there manifested. It raises a strong presumption that Mr. Lewis is more interested in the personal advantages which he gains from disunion than in progress for all labor groups.

In view of yesterday's developments Mr. Lewis' vehement denunciation of the Nazi terror in Germany acquires a disingenuous note. Of course, he was merely joining a chorus of justified protests against Hitler's anti-Jewish campaign. But Mr. Lewis doubtless used this popular note to divert attention from his own refusal to accept reasonable counsel in the interests of labor unity. Even the most laudable humanitarian sentiments do not take the place of active co-operation for the general welfare in the field where Mr. Lewis is equipped to do his most effective work.

Stabilized Pay Plan

The highy seasonal automobile industry has made considerable progress in leveling off the peaks and raising the depression levels of the manufacturing year. However, the industry is still, and probably will remain, subject to a high degree of variation in activity not only during any single year but from year to year. The effects of cyclical business fluctuations, for instance, are felt with especial force by any industry manufacturing relatively high-cost semidurable consumers' goods.

The plan just announced by the General Motors Corporation, however, may greatly alleviate the hardships due to unavoidable layoffs. It does not guarantee a certain amount of employment to workers. Nor does it directly help to stabilize employment. The purpose is simply to assure employes a minimum income throughout the year equal to a certain percentage of their standard weekly earnings.

In broad outline, the General Motors plan gives employes who have had at least five years' service with the company a guarantee that their yearly earnings will not fall below 60 per cent of the total they would earn if fully employed throughout the year. Another, though less liberal, income-stabilizing plan is open to employes with shorter service records.

President Sloan explains that the proposal is experimental and will involve a substantial outlay for the corporation. Only a concern with abundant financial resources could be expected to engage in such costly experiments, and even the strongest of corporations might be forced to abandon a plan of this sort in exceptionally bad years. However, Mr. Sloan believes "that the greater security provided under the plans and the better relations which such co-operation will promote between the corporation and the employes benefited will justify the cost involved."

It should also be kept in mind that any proposal helping to stabilize working class income encourages and maintains a steadier volume of consumer buying that in turn helps to stabilize businesses engaged not only in producing goods for immediate consumption but basic industries indirectly dependent upon consumer buying. Hence not alone on account of a special group of workers who are relieved of the fear of prolonged and total loss of earnings but on behalf of all workers who to a greater or lesser degree suffer similar hardships, the minimum income guarantees of the General Motors Corporation should be welcomed.

If the plan succeeds, and other large corporations can be induced to follow the example set, President Roosevelt's hope that industrial workers may receive an annual wage and be assured reasonable security against dismissals and layoffs would be brought nearer realization. Heretofore this humane objective, despite its essential reasonableness, has seemed to be a utopian dream instead of a program capable of realization.

Pawns In The Game

On more than one occasion a serious mistake has been made by underestimating both the strength and the subtlety of the present German government. This was particularly true in the events preceding the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia, when misjudgment of the factors working for and against the preservation of that democracy led to a horrified surprise in this country at the outcome.

If the great weight of the United States is to be used effectively to counteract progressive Nazi aggrandizement, which is what most Americans undoubtedly desire, our power will have to be intelligently directed. That is why the recall of our Ambassador in Berlin, "for report and consultation" as the President said yesterday, is a step of the most vital importance. Mr. Roosevelt's disbelief that the recent outrages "could occur in a twentieth century civilization" most accurately expresses the American reaction. But since they can occur, and are occurring, it becomes necessary to ascertain exactly what is behind them.

It becomes necessary to realize that what is out of key with twentieth century civilization for us is calculated procedure, deliberately directed to ulterior aims, for the Nazis.

On these ulterior aims the Government needs Ambassador Wilson's personal estimate. To summon him home at all is, under the circumstances, a profound rebuff to Berlin. But much more than this open and undisguised official protest is involved. A clear-headed, unemotional appraisal of the many factors deepening the cleavage between this country and Germany is also necessary. For such an appraisal those competent to clear up a certain mystery about the current pogroms must be called into consultation, prior to taking the further moves for which the situation evidently calls.

The last wave of anti-Semitic persecutions was no popular outburst, as the Nazi officials half-heartedly endeavored to depict it. The whole brutal campaign was officially sponsored and deliberately produced, for some undisclosed purpose. What is this underlying purpose and what, in view of the carefully projected nature of Hitler's policy, does it foreshadow? On this immediate inside information is imperative.

That the move was designed partly to discourage further political assassinations or individual reprisals for Nazi actions is obvious. That the scale of the outrages was made nation-wide in order to force other countries to shelter those whom Germany seeks to exile is also apparent. This is shown by the calculated reduction of the German Jews to a state of complete destitution, which incidentally means a certain amount of authorized loot for the more privileged among the Nazi gangsters.

But there is more than a possibility, considering the unquestionable cleverness of this regime, that a deeper political motive lies concealed behind the obvious reasons. And a broad hint as to what that may be is found in the line that Germany's controlled press, always a barometer of Nazi political atmosphere, is now taking in regard to Great Britain's "inhuman man hunt against Arabs" in Palestine. The most naive would become suspicious when Nazi spokesmen, after the last few days, begin to protest "inhuman man hunts" elsewhere.

It is not merely in America that anti-Semitic persecutions have repercussions. In Palestine; where the issue between Arab state and Jewish homeland is being ever more clearly drawn, the events in Germany are as a call to renewed defiance by the Arab leaders. And this German gesture of support for their cause comes just as British military action, plus a new British plan for amicable settlement, was promising a restoration of quiet in the Near East.

With the signing of the Munich agreement Germany's potential interests in the Near East multiplied overnight. With the death of Mustapha Kemal the possibility of a Turkey co-operative in the Drang nach Osten again arose. With the continued delay in initiating the Anglo-Italian treaty the chances of Italian aid in keeping the Near East in ferment remain. Against all this background the German pogroms must be assessed.

To most Americans the current persecution of the Jews in Germany seems an isolated outrage. To Nazi Germans, working with cold and ruthless precision on a long-range program, these thousands of persecuted individuals may well seem only pawns in a larger game. On this larger policy, and all its rapidly growing implications for the United States, Ambassador Wilson may be expected to report.

Not Yet Too Late

A rising tide of popular indignation again bids fair to inundate the proposed Jefferson Memorial. If steam shovels begin their work of destruction before the new Congress has an opportunity to clear away the misunderstandings under which funds for this project were obtained, this will be the most unpopular and bitterly resented monument in Washington.

Vehement public protests blocked the original scheme to dump a massive Pantheon in the midst of the beautifully informal Tidal Basin. All of the burning indignation manifested in that campaign is now reviving, along with a deep sense of injury. Thousands of citizens in Washington and elsewhere realize that they have been deceived. They have every reason to be bitter over the deceitful reversion to plans for wholesale destruction of trees in this charming natural area.

In outlining plans for the revised project the late Chairman Boylan, of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, said that the Tidal Basin would "retain its present irregular outline and natural beauty." His assurances on this point were supplemented, as recently as September 29, by explanations from Otto R. Eggers to the effect that only a few cherry trees would have to be removed and that no alteration in the Tidal Basin would be necessary. Mr. Eggers represents the architects who designed the memorial. Since his statement was coincident with final indorsement of the plans by the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, it may be assumed that he made a similar report to them.

Under the impression that objectional features of the memorial had been eliminated Congress hastily appropriated $500,000 to begin the work. It did not take time to pass upon the design or location of Mr. Boylan's ponderous temple. Because of the adjournment rush it was carelessly assumed that the entire problem could be instrusted to the memorial commission. The mistake of that presumption is now becoming apparent.

Bids are about to be opened for the execution of plans that would remake part of the Tidal Basin area. Instead of a few trees being moved, hundreds will be destroyed—128 fifty-year-old elms along with the cherry trees. Funds for the memorial would never have been appropriated if the extent of this landscape butchery had been known.

Many officials are perturbed over the present progress toward a colossal blunder. But they are taking the attitude that Congress has spoken and that it is too late. Congress, however, did not order this project started. It left the matter to the discretion of the memorial commission. If that agency has power to proceed with the work, it certainly also has power to stop it.

President Roosevelt has indicated that he will have something to say about the memorial project in the near future. Engineer Commissioner McCoach and numerous civic organizations have already spoken. The probability that Congress also will review the project should certainly preclude the letting of any contract before re-examination can be completed.

Relief And Rearmament

The need of building up national defense is so apparent as to require no extraneous pretext to give it validity. However great the additional burden may be, there is every reason to believe the American people will gladly shoulder it so as to make the United States and this hemisphere secure against outside attack.

It would be misleading, therefore, to justify defense expenditures on any other ground than that they are needed to insure that security. The suggestion in some quarters that rearmament be tied in with the present program of Federal spending because it will constitute a means of producing jobs is indefensible. Unemployment relief is one thing; rearmament is something altogether different. The two should be kept separate and apart.

Fortunately, this suggestion of bracketing rearmament and relief has not gone beyond the trial balloon stage. At his press conference yesterday the President indicated that the subject of defense needs is being given the closest study and that no final conclusions have been reached as to specific measures. But any scheme of merging WPA activities with military preparations is out of order before it is introduced.

France is frightened considerably more than we had imagined. The other day she mumbled something about possibly paying a little on her war debts to the United States.

A Brooklyn mail carrier, arrested for throwing mail away, said he did this because carrying it gave him a backache. Around the first of the month we throw ours away because it gives us a headache.

Secretariat Of Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest the report of David Lloyd George's Armistice Day speech in which he states: "To secure permanent peace a world pacification is essential. Without it we shall breathe daily an atmosphere of war . . . The only chance of a world peace is an assembly of nations to discuss without reference to past experiments or present ideologies or wars the best means of a just and durable world peace. Where is the statesman who will take this project in hand and will and can press it through?"

No one can doubt that world organization through some sort of idealistic method of removing this "atmosphere of war" is needed if we are ever again to live sanely. The present rush for armaments can in no way solve the problem. At most the best claim that can be made for present rearming is that it will prepare us for the time—which I pray will never come—when the most civilized methods of warfare will be employed in a scramble for power that will put barbarism to shame.

Mr. Lloyd George's proposed way out is the formation of a new assembly of nations. Without being pessimistic, I must wonder how this assembly will be better fitted to solve world problems than the impoverished League which still sits today. Mr. Lloyd George also does not answer his own question, "Where is the statesman who will take this project in hand and will and can press it through?"

We can learn from the League of Nations experiment that to be effective an assembly must have the people of each country solidly behind it. The need is plainly for a man, let us call him a secretary of peace, who would gain popular support through extensive character and peace education and would be fitted for this extremely important responsibility. Dr. Frederick Kettner states: "Although peace has always been desired, the basis upon which true and perpetual peace may be established has never been found. After countless efforts to end war by means of treaties and peace pacts, man has finally come to the conclusion that it is not enough to make negative preparations, such as alliances and treaties for the prevention of war, but that is important to take positive steps toward instilling into mankind an enduring peace consciousness. The method proposed is to establish secretaries of peace."

The program for such a secretariat would include academies for world peace, national and international peace stamps, a department for peace research, peace encyclopedias, yearly peace contest in art, music, sculpture, literature, etc., national peace press, peace ambassadors to represent the secretaries of peace of their respective governments in foreign countries, and a league of secretaries of peace.

I believe that only in such a constructive peace program lies the hope for future peace. Many years ago such an advanced idea was an idealistic dream, now it is a practical necessity.

Irreverent Markets

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just after the big election of 1936, before the $5,000,000,000 good-will fund ran out and the New Deal fund of self-esteem threatened to overflow the spillways, the New Dealers hailed strength in the stock market as a sign of a populace gone delirious with joy at the outcome.

To all practical purposes, and despite smiling just-as-I-had-it-doped alibis now making their appearance daily, defeat beyond its most pessimistic calculations has been the lot of the New Deal as a result of the election. Again markets, irreverent, have shown strength.

To what do our incumbent rulers ascribe this perversion, this lese majeste? To what the delirium of joy? To the fact that, despite the purge campaign that backfired, the great and only New Deal is still in control?

I nominate myself a committee of one to pray the irreconcilable Mr. Ickes to furnish the answer. I'm also sure the 12,000,000 unemployed guys the Administration is saving (for 1940 can it be?) would be hugely diverted by his account thereon while lounging at Louie's toying with their—ah!—aperitifs!

The Political Cycle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Walter Lippmann's article, "The Astonishing Normality of American Voters," in The Post November 12 presents an interesting problem. But I do not think Mr. Lippmann's explanation is satisfactory as he ignores some basic factors.

The "tides" or cycles of progressivism and conservatism in politics which last respectively eight and 12 years do not operate in a vacuum of pure political ideology, but have their sources in economic conditions. Roger Babson and others have given us a business chart showing the cyclic nature of depressions and prosperity. It is the nature of capitalism that every period of inflation is followed by a corresponding deflation. In a period of deflation and business retrenchment, unemployment results. The distress is recorded in support of political progressives, or, as the conservatives call them, "radicals."

Just as soon as the masses have the edge taken off their appetites, they get a sense of belly-fullness and well-being. This is nowhere more reflected than in the philosophy or rather mood of the A. F. of L. and its "full dinner pail." It is reflected in the WPA mood which, once the helpless are helped, turns on the hand that feeds it.

Mr. Lippmann is correct when he says that the conservative tide is registered by the mass of people who "possess property, position, and rights, and who can be humane, tolerant, and idealistic because they feel secure." He ignores, however, the voteless millions who are disfranchised by poll-tax laws and the shifting of workers due to the migratory nature of many industrials. This element probably would not be conservative.

What happens to create a conservative cycle as in the recent election is a fear reaction that the propertied class, the upper and middle, has aroused by such carefully staged "Dies committee investigations" and the hysteria stirred up by certain newspapers (not The Post) which reflect the interests of the propertied classes. I will also grant that the fear reaction was also fostered by "sit-down" strikes. The Dies committee investigation was carefully staged just before the elections to influence them. Its work will be continued because of its success in an attempt to swing the country back to a reactionary basis.

Mr. Lippmann does not speak of those psychological devices used by the propertied interests to control the voters. The rub comes when the "sit-tight" policy of the conservatives, as in the Hoover Administration, threatens to [illegible] tate a revolution. Then the beneficiaries, especially the [illegible] class, are ground between the upper and nether millstones of capitalism. Then the middle class welcomes "innovation."

Fallacy Of War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Free talk of well-meaning enthusiasts about the necessity of "going to war for our ideals" and "to defend democracy" is dangerous and fallacious doctrine.

The quickest and surest way to surrender democracy in our own country and to have a totalitarian state automatically imposed upon us would be to declare a war—any kind of war for any avowed purpose. Anyone with a 20-year memory should know that.

In the World War, whose ostensible objectives on our part were "to end war" and "to make the world safe for democracy," ten million young men died in agony on battlefields and thirteen million more were sentenced to carry maimed and mutilated bodies for the rest of their life span, for arms and legs do not grow on again when an Armistice is declared.

If slaughtering ten million failed to achieve its purpose, why should one think that crucifying twenty or thirty or fifty million would be any more successful?

Democracy is primarily a state of mind. To try to impose or preserve it by force is a contradiction in terms. We have Fascists and Nazis in this country, and let no one think that we lack potential Hitlers. So far, happily, they are in the minority, but so originally was Hitler. Why play into their hands by setting up the framework in which they would be able to seize power under a pretense of national "defense" or national "necessity," just as Hitler did in Germany?

The World War did not make the world safe for democracy. Just the contrary was the result. It paved the way abroad for the domination of the worst and most cruel human elements, those that lust for power at the expense of their fellow human beings.

And in this country it made 2,200 new millionaires.

Dangers From The Air

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The terrible accident in which two Army fliers were killed when their plane crashed into a street of the Anacostia section of Washington should serve as a timely warning. That no pedestrians and automobilists were injured must seem miraculous; undoubtedly the pilot, seeing the great peril, was able to maneuver his craft during the few seconds remaining in such manner that no other fatalities occurred.

It is reported that "a routine flight over the city" was to have been made. Some of the questions which the public will want to know are: Why are flights of this type permitted over cities and other congested places? Do they serve useful tactical purposes commensurate with the danger and risk involved? In case of unavoidable accident, what precautions are the fliers supposed to take in order to avoid, in so far as possible, loss of life and damage to property?

And do civilian pilots of commercial planes receive specific instructions in case of the possibility of just such an accident? The location of the local airport makes it exceedingly hazardous for those upon whom death can come from the sky both day and night.

I have noticed that many of the so-called avoidable mishaps usually happen immediately after the take-off or in making a landing, therefore it behooves every pilot, whether military or civil, to exercise the utmost care and vigilance while flying over metropolitan areas.

The Post Impressionist

In Twelve Volumes

I HAVE always prided myself upon an excellent sales resistance, and this afternoon was no exception. The nice young lady explained the superiority of her particular set of juvenile books without tempting me in the least. While I have no prejudice against books in sets, they are my husband's pet hate, and after all, he pays the bills.

When the agent became thoroughly discouraged and left to seek a more receptive audience, I closed the door upon her and turned back to the living room. Of course, it might have been the cat, but there seemed to be some sort of disturbance going on behind the big dictionary stand. Upon investigation, I found the trouble to be among a shabby row of volumes standing in the most inconspicuous corner of the bookshelf. They were glaring at me, and hissing. "Turncoat! Hypocrite!"

I remember the afternoon that the box arrived. It was several days before my birthday, but the whole month of August was mine by natal right. I had a peculiarly possessive feeling for the hot days and starry nights, for the big tubs of August lilies on the front porch, and for the last few lingering raspberries that were ready to drop off at a touch. So it was natural enough for me to be on the receptive end at any time during the month. When one is 9 years old, one feels an almost mystical ecstacy about birthdays.

The nails squeaked as my brother pried off the top of the wooden box. Inside, the 12 volumes stood in rococo splendor, very elegant in their red and green bindings. Gold letters on their backs declared their contents, from "Favorite Fairy Tales" on down to "Familiar Poems and Index."

Thereupon, a new world came into being. The books were my only realities, and eating and sleeping were merely dreams. Conscientiously, I took them in order, starting with Brothers Grimm, with moral sprinklings from Aesop. The next volume had to do with folklore, and it seemed that there were as many different kinds of fairies as there were different kinds of people. The sound of the word "leprechaun" was intriguing, but "ouphe" was too much like a grunt to be pleasant. Later in the same book there was a story about Conla, "of the fair freckled face," which at once disturbed and consoled me. My own besprinkled countenance was too humiliating to fancy a hero who actually bragged about his condition, and besides, the illustration showed him with a weeping walrus mustache.

In the middle of "The Myths of Greece and Rome," my mother became definitely worried about me. It was not right for a child to sit in a corner and read all day, and she was going to Take Steps. However, they were warded off by a certain amount of field work. The story of Clytie sent me out to the chicken yard to see if the sunflowers that grew along the fence really did follow the sun with their faces.

After reading about Persephone, I walked down the dusty road and across the railroad track to the cluster of weathered and tumbledown cabins that housed the town's help. I had not dared to ask permission, for I knew that it would have been refused, and felt guiltily uneasy as I scuttled through the almost tropical undergrowth that almost hid Louisa's cabin from the road. She had everything else growing in her yard, so it was likely that she had a pomegranate tree. And indeed she had; there were three rust-colored balls hanging on it, and she gave me one of them. I sat on her splintery steps and broke it in half, delighting in the neat rows of glistening rubies.

After reading the legend of the laurel, I looked at the scrubby bush that grew under the kitchen window, and in the pristine innocence of childhood, marveled at the stupidity of a nymph who preferred such a transformation to the company of a superior person like Apollo.

Winding up with "Poems and Index," I felt very cultured indeed, and took the Lady of Shalott in my stride along with Wynken, Blinken and Nod, and Pippa passed before my eyes in company with the Village Blacksmith. I must have read the index, but don't remember the details.

ooo

With Christmas coming, and taxes due in January, I hope no pleasant lady comes along with a remarkable offer of "Classical Books for Children," for my sales resistance has been definitely lowered.

Thoughts On Women

LADIES CONSTITUTE a separate race so different from men that it is impossible to understand what goes on with them. The best a man can do is guess. It is a good deal like talking with a Frenchman. For instance, they never pick up a check but, just by turning on the old charm, they can make you feel that it is an honor and a privilege to do all the buying. I don't know what it is that makes ladies and Frenchmen feel that it would be undignified of them to lift a little weight now and again, but they do feel so, and, what is more, they put it over.

PEGLER

As an example, one night when I was a very young cub reporter I make the acquaintance of a lady while strolling in an amusement park way out by the clay holes on the west side of Chicago, and in no time at all was tempting her pretty lips with beer and sandwiches. This went on to the extent of about $2, and as we left the beer place I had only $1 left. Then she saw a man selling kewpie doll lamp shades and squealed that she would love to have one. She lisped.

THE MAN SHOVED it in her hands.

"How much is it?" I asked.

"A buck," the man said, so I gave him the buck and had to walk home—about five miles. There is just no sense to such things, but there is something about ladies—and Frenchmen, too—which makes us try to create with them an impression of wealth and open-handedness.

They have secrets, too. They have a private opinion of men as a race, and they always analyze us and pitch to our weakness all the time to make us do as they want us to. You have to piece this knowledge together from experience and remarks that they let slip sometimes, like when they are sore over something. Boys can't understand it at all.

LADIES THINK most men are conceited and either need bolstering from their wives or bolster themselves all the time by telling their wives how wise and strong they are, in which case they are terrible bores.

They look at a man's waistline, and if he is getting blappy around there they feel humiliated and think back to when he was lithe and young. But generally they mask their true meaning about this by saying that he was altogether too skinny when he was a bridegroom and that this new handsomeness and filling out is due to good feeding at their hands.

This is a velvet knock, but there would be a terrible time in the love bower if the husband should say, "Well, Sugar, I was just noticing how you have widened out yourself from the good providing that you have enjoyed since I took you off your family's hands, and I think it is fine, because there wasn't much of you then. Just a slip of a girl then. Just a pretty little thrip."

BUT THE HUSBANDS don't say that. They grin about their increased heft and make jokes about how scrawny they were 20 years ago, but they try not to let on that they have noticed any difference in her. That would be worth a man's life.

Ladies think they just take over where the man's mother leaves off and continue the job of keeping him up on his manners, guiding him in his affairs and making his important decisions for him, while at the same time making him think he makes the decisions. Under this system they can take credit for all the smart decisions and claim that the mistakes were made when he wouldn't listen.

AS IT WILL BE SEEN, all this is defensive business. Ladies are just at the right time with some man when they are young and marrying, but in time they begin to have little nags back and forth as the man regains his mental balance. So they build up this quiet superiority and smiling condescension business, decide that there is no harm in letting them think that way if it makes them any happier. Usually, when a lady thinks she has been quietly shrewd and induced her husband to make some wise decision in his affairs the fact is that he intended to make that decision all along.

Men are not such dummies. They are the clever ones to let the ladies think they are dummies to keep things happy. But that is just it. Why does it make these strange people happy to think they are married to dummies?

Hitler's Latest Move

Public Reactions To Nazi Pogrom

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The latest developments of outrage against the Jews is so appalling one wonders if this is the age called civilization. The brutality and violence carried on against thousands of human beings has caused such misery and suffering that people everywhere are revolted and indignant.

There must be some ways and means of helping these stricken people. We Americans, living in the largest democratic country in the world, enjoying liberty and peace, would gladly come to the defense of these persecuted through the leadership of the President as a humanitarian.

First, by raising a fund for immediate relief; secondly, allowing those who are desirable, with visas, to enter this country at once; thirdly, get the co-operation of other countries who have voiced sympathy and expressed desire to extend aid; and lastly, put a ban on German goods and prohibit the sale of any materials to them that would be used for war purposes.

The time has come to cease protesting and take action.

MOLLYE PEARSON.
Washington, Nov. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Feeling the need for immediate, imperative action in regard to the present aggravated Jewish crisis in Nazi Germany, the Astor Club, a group of Jewish youth, sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt last Sunday night:

Franklin Delano Roosevelt,
White House,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. President: We, an organized group of Jewish youth in the city of Washington, D. C., in light of the recent horrible, unpardonable Nazi persecution against the Jews, have been impelled to voice our sincere feelings. We appeal to you as the President of the greatest democracy in the world to protest against such bestial action by severing trade relations with Germany and declaring a complete embargo against German goods.

Respectfully yours,
THE ASTOR CLUB.

We urge that all groups and individuals, of any nationality, race, or creed who desire to put a halt to this bestial persecution of Jews and other racial and religious minorities in Germany, send similar protests to our President.

THE ASTOR CLUB.
Washington, Nov. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

What is the matter with the German people? Is it true what we read in the headlines? After 20 years of living in Baltimore, I am impressed with the high character and the social value of the Germans in Baltimore, although I am aware that they were sifted out of Germany in the troublous times of 1848, and like the Huguenots of France, they came to enrich and develop the new America. These refugees for conscience sake are far above the average, bringing the arts, manners and ideals of a free people.

It is plain to all that we must take sides now, and assume our duty and our rights in the family of nations—giving it any name you wish. But, before deciding on a course of action, let us recognize that economic law is God's law, and there is no appeal from the forces behind economic law. Maybe this is a new conception of God's law, but it is true. If you leave out men, law has no meaning, and the new world of collective action must have new minds to preach a new gospel of freedom, under economic law. Idealism and romanticism will find their proper place in a sound economy.

EDMOND FONTAINE.
Ruxton, Md., Nov. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Another chapter of terror and shame has been written in the history of mankind. The most atrocious and unspeakable crimes have been committed in the name of race and religion, and now, in this twentieth century are we to witness and endure more of these crimes which are so degrading to civilization?

We shudder when we read about the Inquisition in Spain, the pogroms and terror that were carried on in Russia, and the maltreatment of minorities in other sections of the world. Massacres and brutality have left their bloody marks on the pages of history. Mankind is still in a semi-civilized state and our progress has much territory to cover before there will appear a greater consciousness of understanding and justice among men.

However, let us not lose hope for the future, even though the present outlook is dismal. The people of America are aware of the destruction and unhappiness rampant in other countries, and it is up to us to do all in our power to refrain from being swept into the whirlwind of barbarism and to hold on to the principles and standards of decency that we have been thus far preserving. At least America is still a country of freedom and of hope, and perhaps we are the ones chosen to light the way to a more constructive life, thereby setting an example to those who are pursuing a course of destruction.

WANTMORE JUSTICE.
Washington, Nov. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A lot has been said about Germany being a "have-not" nation. I would like to ask why when in 1914, when they were still in possession of their colonies and evidently a "have" nation, they still persisted in their "Drang nach Osten" and thus forced the World War.

To those who still feel that an injustice was done the German people by the enactment of the Versailles Treaty, I would ask the entire world, in reviewing the appalling outrages committed by them against helpless and defenseless minorities, whether or not an injustice has not been imposed upon the entire world in being forced to deal with a pariah nation. JESSIE R. KING.
Washington, Nov. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The intolerance and brutality of the German government to racial and religious minorities demand that definite steps to halt the slaughter be taken now.

According to the latest press reports, it is impossible for the Jewish people to buy food and clothing, or for their children to attend schools. Since most of these people own property and have money cannot something be done to see that they are allowed to keep what is rightfully theirs?

Then, too, under the harrowing circumstances, would it not be possible to lift the quota and allow more German refugees to come into this country and other democratic lands?

A boycott of all German goods, as well as an embargo on goods, including materials of war, shipped from this country to them, seems to be the most effective means of making those in power in Germany see that we in the United States will back up our protests with strong economic measures. Formal protests have been made time and time again to the Nazi government and have proved ineffective. Now is the time to take strong action!

SYLVIA WALKER.
Washington, Nov. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I believe it a duty to voice resentment and condemnation of wrong and injustice, and especially so when they are evidenced upon so large a scale of cruelty and barbarity as the action of the German government against helpless minorities.

I have inherited from my Huguenot ancestry such an intense love of liberty and undying hatred of arbitrary power, especially when misused, that it is impossible for me to keep silent in the face of such bestial happenings under the Nazi regime, which in their unprecedented terribleness, cry aloud to heaven for retributive justice. It looks as if the Germans, or their rulers, at least—for we cannot believe the nation as a whole approves such action—have lost their hearts and souls and reverted to a state of demoniac, barbaric savagery that would put to shame the Huns and Attila of ancient days.

The entire civilized world should protest in no uncertain terms and convey to the German government expressions of its abhorrence. By such acts it has forfeited its place among the civilized nations of the earth. It has officially repudiated God and Christianity and unnecessarily proclaimed to the world its paganism. Civilized nations should no longer recognize Germany as one of themselves and should at once withdraw all diplomatic and commercial relations with Germany and completely ostracize and isolate her. This might make the maniac rulers of Germany realize the heinousness of their offenses and cause them to pause in their mad career.

Give A Man A Chance

DOROTHY THOMPSON.

WITHIN THE LAST few hours a very remarkable thing has happened. This country has suddenly discovered that on one issue we are one people. The issue has been precipitated outside our boundaries by a country that only a few weeks ago proclaimed its desire for peace and appeasement and concluded a peace pact with Great Britain and France.

The immediate consequence of that pact has been an unexampled reign of terror against political minorities and against the Jewish population of Germany. This terror has turned the stomach of the American people. Suddenly and spontaneously they have risen, regardless of party, regardless of race, regardless of class, in a protest which declares that there is in this country the front of which I spoke in a column a few days ago—the front of human decency.

Much as we differ among ourselves on every social, political and economic program, we are one on the principles embodied in the American Bill of Rights. We are against terror and oppression. We are against the cynicism that brings an indictment against a whole people, totally regardless of the individuals among them. The State Department in asking our Ambassador to return from Germany acts as an agency truly representative of American tradition, American principles and American opinion.

ON MONDAY NIGHT I had a remarkable demonstration of what that public opinion is. On the regular program of the General Electric Co., which takes place at 9 o'clock on Monday evenings, I tried to picture the mentality of Herschell Grynzspan, the 17-year-old refugee who murdered Herr Vom Rath, and whose deed was the signal for the outbreak in Germany.

I expressed my own feeling that to send this minor to the guillotine for a crime that has already been paid for by deaths, suicides, thousands of arrests, a blanket fine of $400,000,000 and the economic ruin of half a million people was one more act very hard to stomach.

I pointed out that every Jew in Germany was being held a hostage for every action outside taken by any individual Jew or Jewish organization, and that I thought it the business of non-Jews to provide for his defense, since he was penniless.

The response was flabbergasting. I am in receipt of some 3,000 telegrams, still uncounted letters, and several hundred dollars in checks, although I did not ask for money, and was speaking solely for myself. The telegrams came from 46 States. Almost all of them gave their addresses and asked what they could do.

THIS MORNING'S dispatches from Paris record that the French government has published some new edicts, among them one that decrees that a crime which may involve international repercussions may be tried in camera, with the press and pubic barred.

Every American journalist, working abroad, with many of whom I have been in correspondence in the last weeks, knows the terrific pressure which is being exerted on the governments of Britain and France by the Nazi government of Germany.

Europe is literally being terrorized into the most abject submission by the fear of Nazi force.

It would appear that the Nazi government has complete faith in its capacity to terrorize, because no attempt has been made to prevent the facts of what has happened in Germany from reaching the outside world. On the contrary, both Dr. Goebbels and Marshal Goering have acknowledged them in the most cynical manner and affirmed their justification.

UNDER THESE conditions, the United States, her democratic courage fortified by 3,000 miles of ocean, is the one place on earth in which the people can still freely speak their minds and affirm the simplest principles of decency.

One of these principles is that every man, to say nothing of a 17-year-old boy, has the right to a chance to fight for his life, and a right to present his case. The case of Herschell Grynzspan is more than an individual case. It is the case of a whole race, who, in the countries where they are persecuted, have no recouse to law. It is possible that things of great interest to all the peoples of the world lie behind this assassination.

The world still recalls that in the early days of the Nazi regime a half-witted pyromaniac, a Dutch boy named Van Der Lubbe, was sent to the block after the famous Reichstag trial, in which an attempt was made to fix blame upon Communists. German courts were unable to uphold the thesis of the Nazi Party, and there was overwhelming evidence to indicate that the Reichstag was burned by the Nazis themselves, and that Van Der Lubbe was the unwitting tool of agents provocateur.

Similarly, it is known to the most reputable American and British journalists in Vienna that the Nazis plotted the assassination of, first, the military attache of the German embassy in Vienna, later changing the victim to the German ambassador, Herr von Papan; that the plot was distracted by Schuschnigg's visit to Berchtesgaden, and the realization of the Nazi aim—the invasion of Austria by other means.

LIKE THE REICHSTAG fire, the assassination of Herr Vom Rath comes at an absolutely pat moment for the German government. The decrees against the German Jews, driving them completely out of German economic life and thus ruining them, were prepared many weeks ago. They were all ready to be put into operation. All that was needed was an excuse—an incident to provide the proper outbreak of organized public rage. The 17-year-old Herschell Grynzspan provided that excuse, with extreme convenience. He also provided the excuse for the Nazi government to lay its hands on nearly half a billion dollars which it desperately needs and which, indeed, it may have already spent, in the construction of the Siegfried Line and the conquest of Austria and Czechoslovakia.

This is not, therefore, a private case but a public case and an international case, since the Nazi government is operating an open conspiracy today in every country in the world.

In view of the enormous public response to the appeal for a defense for Herschell Grynzspan, some of my colleagues have associated themselves with me in undertaking an appeal to the public for a fund to provide for that defense the best available lawyer or corps of lawyers in France.

Only a night and half a day have passed since the broadcast which elicited so many thousands of offers to help. But in that time Hugh Johnson, Heywood Broun, John Gunther, Leland Stowe, Raymond Gram Swing, Hamilton Fish Armstrong and William Allen White have allied themselves with me to form a committee to raise that fund.

We are appealing separately and jointly for other newspaper men to join us, to serve on the committee, use their pens and raise their voices for this defense. In a day or so we shall have a secretary-treasurer. Meanwhile, we are asking that those who will contribute mail their checks to the Journalists' Defense Fund, 730 Fifth avenue, New York, where this columnist has an office. Meanwhile I personally pledge myself to a strict accounting of the funds.

THERE IS A REASON why journalists should do this. All of us are more familiar with foreign affairs than most people, because it is our business. All of us have been trying for five years to tell our readers that this cyclone was approaching. Most of us have spent years in Europe: Mr. Gunther, the author of "Inside Europe," as the roving correspondent of the Chicago Daily News; Mr. Stowe as the Paris correspondent of the Herald Tribune. Both of these journalists reported the Reichstag fire trial. Mr. Swing was for many years the correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and the New York Evening Post in London.

And we, as journalists, are committed to only one platform: The truth. Exposure and truth are the goal of all reporters. Free speech and the opportunity to get at the facts are an absolute necessity of the decent exercise of our profession. In the next days others of our profession will join us, I am sure, in an appeal for funds to finance the defense of Herschell Grynzspan.

We are addressing ourselves wholly to individuals and wholly to non-Jews. We seek a fund that comes from tens of thousands, and will take any sum over a dollar, hoping, however, that those who are sending small amounts will try and club together to simplify bookkeeping.

We appeal to the non-Jewish population, because contributions from Jews may be interpreted in Germany as an excuse for further outrages.

Whatever funds are not necessary to this defense will be turned over to reputable organizations for aid to refugees—in the hope of helping to prevent any more crimes growing out of hopelessness and despair.

And we wish to emphasize that our effect throws no reflection whatsoever on the will of the French people as a whole to have this trial conducted according to the traditional French principles of justice and fair play. We are only aware of the tremendous pressure which may be exerted openly or otherwise, either to distort the issue or prevent the truth from being known. It is in the spirit of fraternity, as a gesture of one democratic people to another, in a time when democracy is at stake, that we are asking American individuals who are not Jews to provide for this defense. The address is 730 Fifth Avenue.

King Carol, Son Arrive in London

London, Nov. 15 (AP).—King Carol and Crown Prince Mihai of Rumania arrived today on a state visit to further Anglo-Rumanian ties at a time when Germany's economic push to the east has been regarded as threatening the neutral complexion of Carol's country.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Halifax, Home Secretary Hoare and representatives of the fighting services made up a welcoming party at Victoria Station.

Hammer Slayer Cries 'Lies' When Doomed

Justice Adkins yesterday sentenced Edward B. Bishop, 35, to die in the electric chair January 27 for killing his wife with a hammer in Pension Park July 22.

"Jesus Christ was persecuted on lies and so am I," Bishop told the Court when asked the formal question, whether he had anything to say in his behalf. He claimed at his trial that he did not remember what happened the night of the killing.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Zionist Disillusion

A 17-YEAR-OLD Polish Jew in Paris went berserk on hearing that his parents, victims of a German mass deportation order, had been dumped on the Polish border; he shot the first German official he could find. In revenge for this boy's act the German government unloosed its tongues of propaganda and the mobs marched to burn Jewish synagogues, smash Jewish shop windows, sack Jewish homes. Goebbels called it off, saying "a final answer will be given to Jewry by way of legislation."

One must read William B. Ziff's angry account of "The Rape of Palestine" (Longmans, Green, $3.50) in the light of such insane phenomena. There was a time, following that 1918 Armistice which we so lately celebrated, when Jews could look to Palestine as a land of future deliverance. Palestine was small, and undeveloped; but the great British government, after consulting the government of the United States and its other allies, had pledged its "best endeavors" to "the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people." Poland might have its pogroms; but there was a hope and a faith in the future.

Mr. Ziff's tragic story, told with eloquent emotion, is of the death of that hope and that faith. He tells it bitterly, and sometimes unfairly; he charges the British government with a deliberate intent to default, a conscious hypocrisy, an outrageous encouragement of Arab hostility, which is often exaggerated. But as to the main outlines of the story he tells there can be no dispute. The Zionist dream has been whittled away, almost to the vanishing point. Palestine offers no refuge today, and no promise of a refuge tomorrow, for the victims of pogroms.

THE COLORED MAP on the end pages of Mr. Ziff's book is eloquent and dramatic. It presents, perhaps a little too definitely, the territory of the Jewish national home contemplated by the Balfour Declaration in 1917; the smaller territory mandated to Great Britain in 1922; the mere fraction of that mandated land which was left after Britain had turned "Trans-Jordania," which had been known as Eastern Palestine, over to Abdullah's wild hordes, and the puny fragment of Cis-Jordan which the Peel Report of 1936 proposed setting up as the eventual Jewish state. That report has now at last been disavowed, after two long years of bitter bloodshed, but still no one knows what will emerge from its ashes—certainly not, at any immediate future, anything which will be a world refuge and a national home for the Jewish people.

Mr. Ziff's story is that told more briefly in 1930 by Stephen S. Wise and Jacob De Haas in their "The Great Betrayal," but with impressive confirmation by subsequent events. Mr. Ziff perhaps takes the wording of the Balfour Declaration too seriously; it was itself a bundle of weasel words, shaded and modified by canny officials in various British departments. In the form in which it was originally submitted to President Wilson it recognized Palestine as "the National Home of the Jews;" before promulgation the subtle but immensely significant change was made to "a national home in Palestine," and the qualifying clauses concerning Arab rights were added. In 1918 the British government wanted to make a dramatic gesture to win world-wide support from Jews; but already it was preparing for retreat.

The British military officials who at first administered Palestine were forthrightly anti-Semitic, according to Mr. Ziff; and he is probably right. That "the generals arranged a pogram in Jerusalem" is a less tenable charge. What Mr. Ziff abundantly proves is that the British mind adjusts itself facilely to the conveniences of empire. When the British feared that France might claim the route to the oil wells of Mesopotamia, the British hotly argued that the lands east of the Jordan were part of Palestine; when their troublesome ally, Abdullah, led his Arab bands (who had never lived there before) into that territory, they soon discovered the "wisdom of divorcing it from Palestine. In time they made it, as Mr. Ziff bitterly points out, the first completely Jewless land in the world!

IN PALESTINE served British officials whose minds dwelt upon the Suez Canal and the route to India through other Arab lands. They were obsessed with the Moslem unrest in India, Egypt, Irak. The war was over; England did not need the Jews; and the Arabs of Palestine, who at that time had never heard of Arab nationalism, were at first easier to handle than the Jews. British officialdom began to find a score of reasons for holding down Jewish immigration, obstructing Jewish land purchase, encouraging the growth of an Arab consciousness. And the Zionist leaders, whom Mr. Ziff despises, felt that their future depended upon co-operation with the British, and accepted compromise after compromise—until they discovered that almost nothing was left.

So the Zionists found the British insisting that Palestine could hold no more people, and barring the gates to more Jewish refugees. In the "Jewish National Home" the Jews were to be forever condemned to remain a minority. Mr. Ziff's array of miscellaneous data is appalling. In no other colony where Arabs live had their British masters shown such passion for Arab rights. Jews were taxed for Arab schools, while no government money went to establish Jewish schools. Jews were blamed because Arabs were pouring into Palestine—a direct result of economic development fostered by the Jews. From the King David Hotel Jews were barred! Hitler's "My Battle" was freely sold in the Jewish homeland, but "The Brown Book of the Hitler Terror" was banned. Jews were jailed for picketing shops that sold German goods. The Jewish seacoast city, Tel Aviv, was forbidden to build docks, even at its own expense, lest it damage its Arab neighbor. Boring for oil in Palestine was forbidden; it might prejudice British oil holdings in Mesopotamia and Persia. Arab nationalists were, as Mr. Ziff sees it, coddled, until in the recent bloody outbreaks they went too far.

I am not quite sure what Mr. Ziff proposes for the future. He is magnificently angry, and imperious in his demands. The Jewish nation "must" be given back its Trans-Jordania, and it "should" also have the Sinai Peninsula. Jewry should seek a mass repatriation of at least 5,000,000 people from the ghettos of Europe. The Arab "must be told" that they cannot bloodily expropriate Palestine. How and by whom? By England, one must suppose. The Jews, "ready for whatever sacrifice is necessary," must "approach Whitehall knife in hand." What does Mr. Ziff mean by that? He gives no hint. He is merely ranting, in a vein sometimes described as "Jewish fascism." That ranting is likely to deprive his book of the force such a book should have in this tragic world crisis.

New Deal Outlook

By Ernest K. Lindley

Mr. Roosevelt And A Third Term

THE 1938 ELECTION has not made a dent in the President's solid conviction that the Democratic Party must remain the more progressive of the two major parties. That is the testimony of persons who have discussed with him the election returns and their significance. No one who has followed his career for a decade or longer would expect him to react in any other way.

LINDLEY.

That immovable conviction must be the starting point for any conjecture about Mr. Roosevelt's relations with the old-line Democrats through the next Presidential election, if not longer. It doesn't follow that he intends to try to force the pace of reform during the next two years. Most of his liberal advisers are agreed that one of their main jobs is to put the New Deal machinery in better running order. They believe this can be done without sacrificing any concrete gain or important aim.

FOR THE NEAR FUTURE most of the further reforms to be proposed will be those essential to an impregnable national defense. The national defense program, the strengthening of the north-south axis in the Western Hemisphere and other problems created by the dismal conditions in Europe and Asia will rise above purely domestic issues. To meet these problems, the Nation must be united. By naming Alf M. Landon as a delegate to the Pan-American Conference at Lima, the President has betokened the spirit of his approach to the paramount objectives of hemispherical defense and foreign policy.

But on the home front the President remains an unreconstructed liberal. That he expects to shape the Democratic platform in 1940 and to select the Presidential nominee, his close advisers have no doubt. Nor is there any doubt that he can accomplish both of those tasks if he remains firm. For the Democrats cannot repudiate Roosevelt and expect to win in 1940. Indeed, they can't expect to win without the active support of Mr. Roosevelt.

THE EXTREME opposition is announcing that Mr. Roosevelt's period of dominance in the Democratic Party is a thing of the past. If so, the period of dominance of the Democratic Party will come to an end in 1940. For the Democratic Party as the majority party of the thirties is the party of Roosevelt. In the recent election conservative Democrats and liberal Democrats alike lost, just as in 1930 and 1932 Republicans lost whether or not they had been especially keen about Mr. Hoover. In expressing themselves through the two-party system, the voters don't make many fine distinctions. If Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal are thoroughly discredited in 1940, the result is pretty sure to be a Republican victory.

The stage is set for further economic recovery. Unless Mr. Roosevelt has completely lost his political skill, there is no reason why he or his program should be less popular in 1940 than they are now. If there is a substantial economic advance, they should be more popular.

IN ANY EVENT nobody can prevent Mr. Roosevelt from taking a hand in the Democratic National Convention in 1940. James A. Farley and many other regular Democratic leaders have never had any doubt about the futility of going into the 1940 campaign without a candidate and a platform which Mr. Roosevelt would support. They have insisted, and still insist, that the candidate must be satisfactory also to the regular Democrats. They object to Harry Hopkins and Harold Ickes and other Presidential favorites who do not have background of party regularity.

There is no real theoretical difficulty in reconciling the views of Mr. Farley and those of the President's more liberal advisers. They could be reconciled in the person of Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, if he were eligible for the Presidency—which, having been born abroad, he is not. Senator Wagner, like Mr. Roosevelt, has a background of party regularity, and at the same time is a consistent liberal.

THE REAL DIFFICULTY is the lack of good men who meet the dual requirement. Given the usable material, a compromise between Mr. Roosevelt and the regular Democrats probably would give the nomination to a second- or third-rate middle-of-the-road candidate who would be hardly distinguishable from a middle-of-the-road Republican nominee.

That is the main reason why the third term talk will not die down. Mr. Roosevelt is not encouraging it. His own aim has been, and still clearly is, to bring about the nomination of a suitable successor. But the regular Democrats don't like the men who seem to be his favorites, and his progressive supporters can't muster much enthusiasm for the regular Democrats who are available. By 1940, the practical politicians on both sides—those whose main interest is in victory—may be clamoring for a third term for Mr. Roosevelt.

Abuse Augurs Nazi Blow at Catholics Next

Confiscation Suggested

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—With the radicals apparently firmly in the saddle throughout the Nazi government and party hierarchy, evidence accumulates to sho what the crushing blows being administered to German Jewry constitute only one phase of a stiffened domestic policy, which may manifest itself soon in a vigorous new onslaught on the Roman Catholic Church in the Reich. Rumblings of this coming storm are already being heard.

Seizures Urged

The Echwarz Korps, organ of the S. S. elite guard, writes: "The degenerated criminal clericals who are enemies of the people and the state, and uninterested in the fate of the nation, are neither desirous nor capable of managing and utilizing the property of the German people. If one were to take this property away one would take nothing to which they would have a defensible legal claim. . . ."

In some quarters this editorial is believed to foreshadow imminent confiscation of monasterial property, and possibly a ban on monastic orders.

The announcement from Washington that Ambassador Wilson had been summoned home for conference created a sensation in diplomatic and Nazi official quarters today.

The press sought to give the impression that the step had nothing to do with Jewish issues. Dispatches from German correspondents assert that though the "Jewish-influenced American press" is attempting to make a sensation out of the "routine trip" to be made by Wilson, there is not confirmation at the White House for such an interpretation.

Press Is Blamed

A dispatch to the "Lokalanzeiger" says: "The visit of Wilson to Washington would be of interest to Germany only if the ambassador—who was eye-witness of the advancement made by Germany during the period of retrogression in Austria and in the Sudeten regions—were to make reports to the White House which would, as a matter of course, give the lie completely to the agitating Jewish press."

With the Nazi radicals in their present mood, speculation is widespread as to whether the State funeral at Dusseldorf Thursday for Ernst von Rath will precipate a new storm of anti-Semitic violence. The anxieties of the German Jews on this account are increasing hourly.

Outside Blast Sank Nazi Ship

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper said yesterday it was "apparent" that the explosion which damaged the German ship Vancouver in the Oakland estuary, November 3, occurred outside of the vessel.

He said that because this conclusion indicated the investigation should be made by the Department of Justice, he was directing the Bureau of Marine Navigation and Inspection to suspend its inquiry pending investigation by Justice agents.

Roper said the explosion caused plates in the side of the Vancouver to bend inward.

Flandin Slapped For Wire to Hitler

Paris, Nov. 15 (AP).—Pierre Etienne Flandin, former French premier who exchanged congratulatory telegrams with Reichsfuehrer Hitler after the "Peace of Munich," was slapped yesterday by a lawyer who objected.

Flandin, en route to lay a wreath on the Tomb of the French Unknown Soldier, was struck by Lawyer Jacques Renouvin, who shouted, "You will not dishonor the tomb."

Flandin was a leader of the campaign against French adherence to her mutual assistance treaty with Czechoslovakia.

Loyalists Driven Back Across Ebro, Insurgents Report

Hendaye, France, Nov. 15 (AP).—The Spanish insurgent command at Irun announced tonight that Gen. Franco's troops had driven government forces back across the Ebro River in northeast Spain with the capture of the important towns of Asco and Flix and domination of the Rebarroja Heights to the west.

Meanwhile additional forces under Gen. Juan Yague entered the outskirts of Ribarroja, 3 miles west of Flix, described as the last government stronghold on the Ebro's west bank.

The insurgents announced today's advance in both sectors penetrated the government's front lines to a depth of 7 miles.

Premier Imredy Ousts 4 Ministers

Budapest (Wednesday), Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Premier Imredy announced early today the formation of a new cabinet less than eight hours after he and his entire government had resigned in order to eliminate four opposition ministers.

Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, commissioned Imredy to form a new government after a cabinet crisis resulting from Imredy's demands for broad powers to permit him to carry out a land reform program.

Chinese Held Growing Angry At America

U. S. Engineer Returns
Arms to Japan Assailed
Friendship Loss Feared

A wave of bitterness against the United States is growing in China for taking the part of a "fair weather friend" in the Sino-Japanese undeclared war, Maj. Oliver J. Todd, recently returned to this country after 20 years of directing flood control work along the snaky Yellow River in North China, said here yesterday.

TODD

This feeling of bitterness, he said, may close the doors of the Asiatic nation to America and result in an end to the friendliness China has always felt for the United States, thus denying this country vital interests in wishes to maintain in China.

"While high Chinese officials feel that the United States should intervene in the war, they are not laying down terms of this intervention," Todd said.

Arms Ban Held Desire

"What the Chinese want probably most of all is a declaration from the United States that a state of war exists between Japan and China, and a cessation of war materials from America to Japan," he added.

Todd said he was told by high Chinese consulate officials in California that "China can hold her own against Japan, but not against Japan and America."

Todd expressed belief that Russia is certain to step into the conflict and that America will lose its foothold in China perhaps permanently if she stands by while another nation goes to China's aid.

Todd, who built and rebuilt thousands of miles of highways and dikes along the Yellow River was at American Red Cross headquarters here briefly before going to New York to make lectures.

He predicted that hostilities in China will be reduced to an unceasing guerrilla warfare within "the next few months," unless China can get arms and munitions from other nations "and if the United States and Great Britain continue furnishing Japan with war materials."

Todd, a major of engineers with the United States Army Reserve Corps, was consulting engineer for the Yellow River Commission, in charge of flood control and construction of dikes, until the Japanese armies brought his job to a sudden end late in 1937.

He returned to this country about six months ago and plans to continue his flood control work in California. He has written several books on China and its Yellow River. He will return to Washington Monday to speak to the Society of Washington Engineers at the Army and Navy Club.

Antitrust Chief Denies Plan to Rule Advertising

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division, said yesterday the Justice Department had no intention or desire to regulate advertising.

R. E. Elliott, associate editor of the magazine Advertising and Selling had asked Arnold to elaborate statements the department made regarding advertising in connection with the Ford and Chrysler antitrust cases.

Arnold said:

"In my judgment, sound advertising is a creative effort, and would not be an appropriate subject for coercive regulation. Even when the economic validity of its use is questionable the situation will ordinarily contain too many intangibles and variables to warrant any rule of thumb."

France to Sign Security Pact With Hitler

To Guarantee Frontier
Free Nazi Hand in East
Daladier to Be Dictator

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 15.—France prepared today to arrange a bargain with Reichsfuehrer Hitler which would in effect give Germany a free hand in eastern Europe.

In return France would demand a Nazi guarantee of her Rhineland frontier.

An official spokesman said a preliminary basis had been reached for a joint renunciation of war to insure peaceful co-operation between the traditional enemies, substituting conference tables for war in any future disputes.

It was expected the accord would parallel closely the agreement Hitler and Premier Chamberlain signed at Munich September 30 expressing the desire of their peoples never to fight one another again.

Free Hand for Reich

Following that general line, it was forecast the German-French agreement would have these results:

If another crisis, such as that over Czechoslovakia's Sudeten regions, should arise, France would be pledged to settle her part by conference negotiations as was done at Munich.

Germany, therefore, would be free to pursue her own policies in eastern Europe without fear of trouble on her western frontier provided she did not threaten or attempt to attack France either by armed force or propaganda.

Meanwhile, friends of Premier Daladier pushed plans to make him virtual dictator of France for at least three years.

To Postpone Elections

Under the plan, which was reported to have been favorably received by Daladier, the Chamber of Deputies elections scheduled for the spring of 1940 would be postponed two years. In return, the deputies would vote Daladier a continuation of his semidictatorial decree powers until 1942.

Deputies who favored the plan held it contained the only possibility for the premier to push through his reforms in domestic and foreign policy.

It was pointed out that Finance Minister Reynaud's program to rebuild the nation's finances and economy had been labeled a "three-year plan" by the cabinet.

The revelation of the plan, following closely upon issuance of Reynaud's decrees, was seen by Conservative deputies as the logical move in the premier's program of sweeping—almost revolutionary—changes in French domestic and foreign policies.

The National Congress of the General Confederation of Labor, representing 5,000,000 workers, today adopted a motion opposing the Daladier government's economic and financial decrees promulgated last Saturday.

Carol of Rumania Greeted by British With Royal Pomp

London, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—King Carol II of Rumania returned with royal pomp today to British soil from which he was expelled eight years ago as a political agitator while he was in exile from his native country.

Carol and his son, Prince Mihai, were greeted at Dover by the Duke of Kent and later welcomed personally by King George VI.

The visit was regarded as highly significant, in view of the efforts of Britain and France to woo back eastern Danube nations into the waning influence of the western democratic bloc in the face of Germany's march toward the east.

The Rumanian King is believed to be steering a middle course between the dictators and the democracies, and Britain may offer him financial loans to strengthen the latter ties.

President Calls on American Nations To Plan Mutual Defense at Lima Parley

Defense

try in relation to this continent and hemisphere has had to be changed.

He declared continental solidarity among the American republics and Canada more definite and unanimous than at any time in the last 120 years, or since the Latin-American republics were struggling for independence.

As a continental doctrine, the President said, we must be prepared to carry out the conception of solidarity established at the Buenos Aires conference, of December, 1936, which the President himself attended. This means, he added, that necessary steps must be taken to maintain this solidarity against threats from any other continent.

No Defection Expected

The fact exists, he told correspondents, that safety of this continent in that connection today is far too low.

The United States, he said, is going to take steps, first with resources already at the disposal of the Government, and second, in asking for legislation for defense against any possible aggression.

A reporter asked if in his opinion the problem of national defense now becomes a problem of continental defense. He replied that it did, but in co-operative action with other governments in North, Central and South America. He said he meant a continental defense that does not altogether rest upon the shoulders of the United States.

Significantly, the President mentioned Canada, which is not a member of the Pan-American conference, in his every reference to mutual defense of this hemisphere.

When a reporter asked if there is possibility of any defection from the solidarity he mentioned, he replied that he anticipates no defection. He said he expects complete solidarity.

As questioning continued, the President was asked if the Philippines — Far Eastern outpost now promised complete independence by 1946—is embraced in his plans for the integrity of the hemisphere. He answered only that the American flag flies over the Philippines.

One newsman asked the President to elaborate on the danger from attacks on this continent, to which he had referred. He advised his questioner to read the newspapers for the last five years.

One ambitious naval defense plan the Administration apparently already has discarded. Under questioning the President said he is not contemplating a Navy sufficiently large to defend both Atlantic and Pacific coasts at the same time.

He was asked if proposals to change the neutrality act are involved in the current series of national defense conferences. He said they were not.

The President's long discussion of this continent's collateral defense problem caught correspondents completely by surprise after one had asked a routine question on the status of defense preparations. He said he would be glad to discuss the status of plans, but could supply no details until a comprehensive program is formulated. Then he made clear that this country's defense problem is a continental problem, shared by both the Americas.

Warns on Speculation

Repeatedly the President has advised against newspaper speculation on plane increases and coast defense plans, and this admonition he reiterated.

When asked if national defense budgeting would reach the peacetime record of $1,500,000,000, or 50 per cent larger than this year, he said not necessarily so.

In War Department circles reports persist that air force increases for the Army alone may reach a new goal of between 7,000 and 10,000 planes. But the President insisted the actual total is not now determined, or known even by himself. He indicated only that he favored making the air force strong enough to aid in defense of the entire Western hemisphere against any aggression.

Meanwhile a special Senate committee headed by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, sought means of hastening construction of merchant ships which could be converted to Government use in time of war.

Senator Bailey said important strides toward maritime labor peace enable the committee to turn its attention to means of co-ordinating merchant marine and defense programs. Commenting on rapid improvement in maritime labor conditions, Bailey said the committee felt any inquiry now into that subject would only "stir up antipathies."

Stand Pleases Canada

Ottawa, Nov. 15 (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said tonight that President Roosevelt's statement that the United States air program contemplated defense of the entire Western Hemisphere was a further indication of the common concern and interest of Canada and the United States.

The President's declaration, said the prime minister, renewed "the note of co-operation" the President sounded last summer at Kingston, Ontario, when he declared the United States would "not stand idly by" if Canada were threatened by an aggressor.

Argentina Cautious

Buenos Aires, Nov. 15 (U.P.).—Argentina is willing to co-operate with the United States and other American nations in defense of the Western Hemisphere, but is opposed to any formal treaty for such measures, Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo indicated tonight.

"When any situation in connection with joint defense must be met, Argentina will take the necessary steps," he said.

Machado was taken to the hospital about a week ago.

Baptists Chart Fight Against Rumanian Ban

Will Protest Decree
Churches Ordered Shut
D. C. Convention Meets

Efforts to combat the Rumanian government's enforcement of a decree closing all of the 1,802 Baptist churches in that country on December 15 were outlined yesterday at Calvary Baptist Church by Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention, in his annual report.

Through a committee on public relations, composed of members of both the Northern and Southern Conventions, said Dr. Weaver, Baptist bodies have been urged to send resolutions to the Rumanian Minister, Radu Erimescu, here, urging suspension of the decree to June 14, 1939.

His report suggested that Baptist Churches throughout America, on the Sunday preceding Thanksgiving Day, should "stress the blessings of religious liberty that we enjoy in America, compare our happy estate with that of our Rumanian brethren and call upon all congregations by appropriate resolutions to protest against the decree."

Dr. Weaver, in his report, praised the work of the committee on public relations in dealing with "the rights of our missionaries in China through protests made by our State Department to Japan."

A joint session of the convention and the Columbia Federation of the B. Y. P. U. featured last night's meeting, when Dr. Theodore F. Adams, of Richmond, Va., delivered the principal address. The Rev. John Wesley Loftis, George R. Ruhl, federation head; Howard Rees, the Rev. W. B. King, Don Chase, Mrs. Florence C. Bailey, John Ruthven, Louis F. Lucas, Lynn Elmore and Dr. H. M. B. Jones took part.

The woman's Baptist Missionary Association of the District, with Mrs. George A. Ross, president, in charge, will meet this morning, when the principal address will be given by Mrs. Philip S. Evans, jr., missionary to South China.

SOME MEN SHOULD NOT DRINK

If you seek the advice of your physician on the subject of liquor, he will give you a sound answer based on the experience of the medical profession and his knowledge of your own particular case.

He may even tell you that you should not drink at all. He will always advise you to be moderate.

He will tell you that over-indulgence—no matter what form it takes—over-eating, lack of sleep, too strenuous exercise, or intemperate drinking is not good for you. You can rely upon your physician as a friend whose advice can be trusted on all matters that pertain to your physical well-being.

The House of Seagram subscribes whole-heartedly to the attitude which the physicians of America are taking toward the use of liquor. If the question is puzzling you, we say: "Let your physician decide."

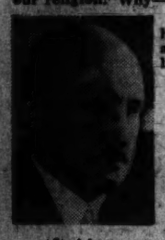
THE BUTCHER OF NUREMBERG

(An imaginary conversation between Adolf Hitler and Theodore Roosevelt, who once protested against Czarist pogroms and the massacre of Armenians.)*

TEDDY: So you can't keep order in Germany after all.

ADOLF: Order? Ordnung? That's our religion! Why——



Streicher . . . fanatic

TEDDY: Then how about your atrocious riots last week?

* * * *

ADOLF: Ach, but you don't understand. That was orderly disorder.

TEDDY: You mean you ordered so many shops looted, so many homes ransacked?

ADOLF: Not exactly; to understand you must be a Nazi——

* * * *

TEDDY: God forbid . . . And in Vienna, you ordered so many cathedral windows broken, precisely so many priests to be insulted?

ADOLF: Not me; my man Streicher, he orders these disorders.

TEDDY: A peculiar animal, Streicher. He looks like a thug.

"—the witch burners of Berlin"

ADOLF: Ja, vielecht. But a fanatical zealot of a thug! An Aryan thug!

TEDDY: Aren't you and your gang a bit superstitious about Jews?

ADOLF: But don't Jews make hurricanes, earthquakes, tidal waves, dreuths, blizzards?

* * * *

TEDDY: You remind the civilized world of the witch burners of Salem.

ADOLF: Burn 'em? Not yet; so far we only beat, rob and starve them.

TEDDY: And how many Protestant pastors and Catholic priests are dying in concentration camps?

* * * *

ADOLF: Ach, such unpleasantness! Only a few thousand.

TEDDY: Do you realize that Streicher's brutality disgusts and nauseates us Americans?

ADOLF: But you Americans once burned a few witches, nicht wahr?

* * * *

TEDDY: Three hundred years ago. Do you yourself approve these atrocities?

ADOLF: My Nazis need some fun. Or they get restless.

* * * *

ADOLF: Ask Streicher or Goebbels; they spread enlightenment.

TEDDY: And why do you threw stones into the Cardinals' and Bishops' houses?

ADOLF: They are too slow to goosestep with our Nazi kultur.

"—a vegetarian's cannibals"

TEDDY: And Pastor Niemoeller is still in prison. But these are Christians.

ADOLF: These Christians are more dangerous to me than the Jews.

TEDDY: Then why don't you attack them and loot their houses?

* * * *

ADOLF: They are too many. The Jews are few; easy to rough up. It amuses our hungry Germans. We muss up the stubborn Christians later. Now, just a few.

TEDDY: And your scheme is to grab colonies for more enlightenment?

ADOLF: Yes, the poor cannibals; we enlighten them.

* * * *

TEDDY: Perhaps they'll enlighten you.

ADOLF: Maybe we learn a few tricks from them, yes.

TEDDY: Your atrocities make the Nazis seem viler to Americans than any one possibly could be to one of your gang. Some day the decent Germans will destroy you.

*This might be a scarcely imaginary conversation between Franklin Roosevelt and Hitler if the President could say what is in his heart.

Md. Hunting Season Opens; 1 Dead, 2 Hurt

Nimrod, 19, Drowns 2 Others Wounded Each in Line of Fire

By the Associated Press.

Perry Point, Md., Nov. 15.—One hunter drowned and two others accidentally peppered each other with buckshot today—the first of the duck hunting season in Maryland.

William Dinsmore, 19, the son of Howard Dinsmore, an attendant at the Perry Point Veterans' Hospital, fell from a motor launch and was drowned in the Susquehanna River near the hospital.

Other members of the hunting party said they left Dinsmore in the motor boat while they rowed to where several ducks had been shot down. They heard him shout and saw him fall overboard. Dressed in boots and heavy hunting clothes, Dinsmore is believed to have gone down immediately. Hospital attendants began to drag for his body.

Edward Hart, 21, and Joseph Fitz, 18, both of Stemmers Run in Baltimore County, aimed and fired simultaneously at a rabbit near Poplar. Both were in line of fire from the other's shotgun. Both were treated at Johns Hopkins Hospital where they were taken by Policeman Clarence Eaton, of Essex.

A mild wind and bright sunshine favored duck hunters along the flats bordering the Susquehanna River, one of the most favored grounds in the East.

Shotguns barked along the entire bar area, along swamps and waterways in Frederick and other western counties.

St. Gertrude's Alumnae Association of Richmond will be the host chapter for the 1939 convention. The chapter also drew the annual scholarship awarded by the association for study at Columbus University in Washington, D. C.

Picture Exhibit Depicts WPA Men as Boards

Painter Explains Needs to 'Sink In' Dedicated to New Deal

An exhibit of 21 pictures entitled "1938—Dedicated to the New Deal," on display a tThe oBokshop, 916 Seventeenth street northwest, were explained by contemporary artists and critics a ta meeting last night of the Washington Bookshop Associatoin in the exhibit hall.

F. A. Whiting, jr., editor of Magazine of Art, and Nicolai Cikovski, artist, explained the exhibit and were subjected to a question barrage by the small group present.

The exhibit shows a friendly attitude toward the Administration, while capitalism, prominent leaders, the stock market, the Senate filibuster against the anti-lynching bill, Hitler and Mussolini are handled severely. A few of the pictures are by participants in the WPA art projects.

A picture by Eitaro Ishigaki, American-Japanese artist, depicts the New Deal as a beach life guard coming to the rescue of workers and farmers caught in the undertow and yelling desperately for help.

WPA, the title of a picture by Theodore G. Haupt, attempts—at least it was so explained—to convey the idea of construction and activity. The workmen are shown as pices of lumber. Haupt's idea seemed to have been to represent workmen as durable and hard to move—like a building.

Other pictures were explained by Whiting and Cikovski, who said they needed time to "sink in" before the full effect was tranmitted to the observer. Robert C. Davenport, chairman of the board of the association, presided.

Md. Woman, Man Held on Charges In Gantt Case

Prince Frederick, Md., Nov. 15 (AP). Charged with accepting money "known to have been stolen from the estate of William Warren Gantt," eccentric farmer who was slain July 12, a young woman and an aged man were ordered held today for the grand jury.

Justice of the Peace Duke ordered Nena Walton, 24, of Dunkirk, held in bond of $1,000. Franklin Thomas, 73, of Cove Point, a caretaker, was released in $500 bond.

The two were arrested by Sergt. John W. Kries and Corpl. Charles W. Agaha, who also arrested Mrs. Blanche Stinnett, 30, wife of Walter Stinnett. Mrs. Stinnett was charged with taking $960 from the slain man's estate. Justice Duke said she told him she gave Miss Walton and Thomas $100 each and spent the remainder.

Stinnett, Mrs. Margaret Abell, 18, of Dowell, and Mrs. Evelyn A. Bajowski, 24, of Baltimore, are awaiting trial on murder charges.

Police Busy as Parking Meters And Motorists Fail to Rhyme

Generous Driver Uses Three Nickels Two Use None and Get Summonses Woman Prefers to Pay as She Leaves

Traffic patrolmen put in their most strenuous day in some time yesterday, not enforcing the traffic laws, but explaining the intricacies of the new parking meters.

Despite all the recent publicity on the operation and regulation of the "nickel-an-hour" gadgets, 90 per cent of the motorists did not know what they were all about, according to policemen who were interviewed.

Patrolman A. R. Newcomb, on a downtown beat along Eleventh street northwest, saw one driver parked in violation.

"Did you put a nickel in the meter?" he asked.

"Yes, I put in three," was the reply as the man drove away.

Another woman who crossed Newcomb's path approached her parked car and the meter showed the red sign of overtime parking.

"Why, officer," she pleaded, "I only parked ten minutes. I thought you put the money in afterwards."

"And it was just like that all day long," Newcomb complained.

John P. Richardson, 30, of Anacostia, had the honor, or dishonor, to be the first motorist made to post collateral for violating the new regulation.

He was taken to the traffic division by Patrolman D. M. A. Connors and made to post $2 on a charge of failing to deposit 5 cents in the meter. He was arrested on Fifteenth street northwest.

Connors said the man parked at the curb and walked away without putting in a nickel.

Shortly after Richardson's arrest, Robert B. Hayden, 28, 1657 Ingleside terrace northwest, also put up $2 collateral. His car was ticketed for overtime parking on Eleventh street northwest.

Both men forfeited the money rather than go to court.

Speech Clinic Turns Falsetto Into Barytone

Six weeks ago Earl W. Miller walked into Prof. Richard Hutcheson's speech clinic at American University with a high pitched, girlish voice. Today he fills the halls of the school with a booming barytone.

MILLER

The cure was effected in 40 minutes after Miller had spoken for 12 years in falsetto. When Miller was an adolescent he had an attack of laryngitis. For a year he could only whisper. Then by straining he found he could speak in a high voice. He knew he had a low voice but he thought it was unnatural and he "only used it to scare the baby."

Prof. Hutcheson cured Miller, now 29, by applying heat from an infrared lamp and then having him remain completely silent for two weeks.

This is only one of many serious speech defects which Prof. Hutcheson has cured. Many stammerers who could only say a few words a minute, carry on conversation without the least difficulty. One man of 54 was completely cured of halting speech after others had advised the professor that "you can't teach a man that age new reflexes."

Speech clinic classes are given during the day for university students and from 7:30 to 9 p. m. five days a week for others.

Prof. Hutcheson insists that his methods are not extraordinary.

900 Parents Visit School At Anacostia

See Classrooms Hear Sir Willmott Watch Experiments

Nine hundred parents visited the classrooms of their children in Anacostia High School last night in the first open house of the city's newest primary school building.

They saw physics and chemistry experiments being worked in the laboratories, peered through microscopes at biological specimens, viewed handicraft exhibits in the shops, watched art students draw from life and witnessed their daughters bake pies and cookies.

They also heard Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the Times of London and principal speaker at a Parent-Teacher Association meeting conducted for the occasion, extol the virtues of the leaders who carved the American Nation out of British colonies in North America.

Lewis called for protection of "civil, personal and political liberty" against the "doctrainaire and chalatan" of the times.

"We have found," he declared, "the only efficient remedy against oppression to be retention by the people of the ultimate power which we call political liberty."

Classroom exhibits were arranged by 57 teachers at the school. Mrs. William Plemmons, president of the Parent-Teacher Association which sponsored the affair, conducted the meeting. John Paul Collins, school principal, introduced Sir Willmott.

In the morning his wife gave birth to a 6-pound son, and in the afternoon he presided at exercices dedicating the denominanion's new church at Deerfield. The old church was destroyed by fire two years ago.

New Regime Must Revise Md. Taxes

Fiscal Plans Upset Scaled Levy Fails Base of Program Problem Grows

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 15.—There's a major fiscal problem facing Maryland State officials.

Voters turned thumbs down on a proposal to levy a graduated tax on incomes along lines of the Federal income tax.

With that expression of public opinion the props literally were pulled out from under a proposed new fiscal setup.

For it was on the income tax base that Democratic Party leaders had planned to stand in lopping off some existing taxes.

Taxes which had been scheduled for elimination or reduction include many of the so-called nuisance taxes, notably those on amusement admissions, pinball machines and cosmetics.

Abolition of the 4½ mill tax on intangible securities and freezing of real estate taxation at present levels also had been contemplated.

Gov.-elect Herbert R. O'Conor has set machinery in motion for finding a solution to the fiscal problems with announced intentions to set up committees to study the whole financial question. His inquiry would go into the budget, reorganization of State departments as a possible means of cutting expenses, and new revenue sources.

The question of new revenue is ticklish. Obvious sources—higher levies on alcoholic beverages and a tax on tobacco products—always have met bitter opposition when previously proposed.

The new revenue group, too, might consider income tax possibilities despite the vote against such a proposal. Some legislative experts have expressed opinion a referendum was not necessary to permit such a tax under the State constitution, but that the vote was merely to feel the pulse of the State residents.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Nov. 15.—Two State appeals from Baltimore Court opinions lowering State revenues were argued before the State Court of Appeals today.

The Baltimore Circuit Court ruling which held Pimlico race track should pay $6,000 and not $9,000 daily license fee was challenged by the State in one appeal. The State also sought a reversal in the Baltimore City Court opinion exempting State judges from payment of State income taxes.

Track Within City

In the racetrack suit, the Maryland Jockey Club of Baltimore City argued that its plant was not in Baltimore County but within the city, and that diversion of an additional $3,000 fee to Baltimore County daily was unfair and discriminatory. The track was formerly located in Baltimore County before annexation by the city.

The State contended the Legislature fixed Pimlico's license fee, and that it did not concern the track management how the State allocated distribution of the fund.

The income tax appeal was taken in the case of Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis, of the Baltimore Supreme Court, who won a ruling that the income tax constituted a "diminution" of his salary, forbidden by the State constitution since colonial times to safeguard the independence of judges.

'The Shining Hour' Does Tricks With Fate!

Picture Reverses Stage Play's Climax
'The Great Waltz' for Thanksgiving
New Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IN the cinema, it seems, there is no such thing as the immutability of fate.

Take the case of "The Shining Hour," for instance, as a convenient example. On the stage, the climax of the play in which Raymond Massey, present star of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," achieved one of his Broadway successes, was a lugubrious sort of episode that seemed rationally logical and Hannah Linden a character who didn't retreat too much from adamant preservation of the Linden family tradition. In the picturization of the drama, previewed by the drama desks yesterday afternoon, there is no tragedy in the climacteric fire and Sister Hannah abruptly undergoes a change of heart that brings everything out on the sunny side, with the right husbands properly paired with the right wives. Sudden, yes, but not so incomprehensible that it passeth all understanding.

BELL

It just goes to show the fallacy of that immutability business.

But notwithstanding that, "The Shining Hour" really shines. It shines with the rather brilliant performances of an excellent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cast, the glistening beauty of a picturesque and handsome production, Frank Borzage's superior direction and a uniformly fine quality of photography. This summary seems to, but should not, omit the frequent passages of sparkling dialogue.

Joan Crawford, in this subject, will be found to be back at her old dancing tricks—and they are very good tricks, indeed, especially with Tony De Marco for a partner. Similarly, Margaret Sullavan will be discovered once more turning on practically the great diapason of her eminent emotionalism and Fay Bainter at her most acidulous. Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young are two affectionately warring brothers, warring over their respective wives and their tormenting sister, and Frank Albertson is a young country lad with an eager lip for a "hot" trumpet and a hotter bottle, who adds his bit to the completion of the picture's major acting ensemble.

There are the ingredients of a meaty dish of celluloid in the story of the cabaret dancer who seeks escape from an obnoxious environment only to find that in the idyllic beauty of a Wisconsin countryside she stands a considerably more than even chance of blasting not only her own life, but every other life she touches, as well.

It is a pretty war that is waged up there in the Wisconsin woods on the lake. The ladies will eat it up—that meaty dish, I mean. The men won't find it so hard to take either, when it opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday.

And that Joan Crawford still can dance—and wear shorts advantageously. Both of which, of course, are minor considerations in a picture that is more serious than that.

While we are on the subject of forthcoming pictures, by the way, the Loew booking sheets have undergone a few erasures and interlineations these past 24 hours. "If I Were King" will continue a second week at the Palace, beginning tomorrow, and that benefit preview of "The Citadel," costarring Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell, will be held a week from tonight, as planned and already announced. On Thanksgiving Day, however, and for the ensuing week, the regular attraction at Loew's Palace will be "The Great Waltz," starring Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Miliza Korjus. This is the production, celebrating the romance and music of Johann Strauss, that inspired all those prize waltzing contests that have not as yet reached their zone and national finals. How's about this thing, Mr. Barron, or shall we just leave the matter lay?

One thing, somehow, just naturally leads to another. Speaking of prize contests reminds me that Master Dan Terrell only a moment ago flitted by the desk with the announcement of the selection of the five judges for that "Movie Quiz Contest" for the grand prize of $50,000 and scads of other lesser awards, being offered as a corollary of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year-Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" jag the industry is on.

With the time limit—December 31—rapidly sneaking up on the millions of contestants (or it is only thousands?) five outstanding national figures have been named to pass judgment on the merits of the brief essays that must accompany the answers to the quiz questions. They are Bruce Barton, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Dr. James E. West, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Henrik Van Loon. This committee will meet in January to select the best essays for the major prizes.

The presence of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody on the board of judges, needless to say, is not to be construed as an implication that the whole thing is a racquet!

Because it is running among the leaders in the poll currently being taken of the Little Theater's regular patrons, and because the management has no open weeks in the near future in which to play it, "The 39 Steps," costarring Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll, will be added to the bill at the Little today.

This will have the effect of converting the program that opened Sunday into a double-feature attraction, without change in the scale of admissions. "The 39 Steps" will run in double harness with "Generals Without Buttons" through Saturday night of this week. The revised running schedules will be found in the "Film Time Table" tucked into some convenient typographical cranny on this page.

It will be pleasant to a great number of theatergoers in the Capital to learn that Patricia Norman, that pint-sized swinger of popular tunes and ballads, who reminded many of her hearers of Gracie Barrie, a Washington favorite, has been booked back at the Earle Theater as a "single" for the week beginning Friday, November 25. Miss Norman was here recently as featured soloist with Jan Garber and His Orchestra and proved a show-stopper on that occasion.

As a result of this obvious popularity, Zone Manager Payette instructed Production Manager Harry Anger to bring Miss Norman back "as soon as possible," not with a band, but as a featured artiste on her own account. This is looked upon as the biggest break yet for the Kingsville, Tex., girl who broke into "show business" as an understudy in a musical revue and then progressed to soloist with many "name" orchestras and on the radio. Her goal is a role in musical comedy and she seems to be well on her way toward it.

Miss Norman, it will be recalled, is the niece of Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, being, in private life, the wife of Jack Meakin, one of the prominent members of the musical staff of C. B. S., if memory serves.

Reverting, if we may, to Miss Katharine Cornell's production of "Herod and Mariamne," current at the National Theater, it appears that in fashioning her English prose version of the Hebbel tragedy, Clemence Dane has unnecessarily gone to some pains to rearrange the chronology of events in ancient Judea. She moves Herod's slaughter of the innocent down the years to provide an anticlimactic last act curtain. To many in the audience on Monday night, the play appeared to end dramatically and effectively when Herod tossed his crown upon the ground upon learning of the birth of another King in Bethlehem. The curtain should have fallen there. Or so it seemed to some of the more presumptuous seated out front.

The newly elected officers of the Variety Club of Washington, announced in this space yesterday, following Monday's balloting, will be publicly introduced to the club membership and their guests for the first time at the fifth annual banquet and ball of the club in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel this Saturday night, pursuant to customary practice.

In response to numerous inquiries, it may be said that at last report there still remained in the neighborhood of 50 tickets available for purchase. They are priced at $7.50 per cover and may be obtained upon application to Dr. Archie Engel, 1416 F street.

So now you know.

Studio 'Big Parade' Features Midgets

A "Big Parade" of little folk took place when Mervyn LeRoy held a mass interview with 50 midgets, who are to play Munchkins in "The Wizard of Oz." They included the troupe of Singer's Midgets, another group recently brought from Austria by Leo Singer, and others recruited from circuses and vaudeville.

The little men and women are many of them musicians, playing various instruments, others singers and dancers. One of them, Charlie Becker, has been an animal trainer with the Singer act for 25 years.

The midgets gathered en masse to display their varied talents while a big crowd gathered to watch. Much mirth was occasioned when Richard Thorpe, the director and one of the tallest men in the studio, marched into their midst to the studio wardrobe to arrange fittings. Most of the midgets came to his knees.

Can-Can Dance Is Good Leg Exercise

A predicament arose on the set of Paramount's "Zaza."

Opera-length black silk stockings ordered for Claudette Colbert were found to be too large.

The beauteous Claudette stood in short ruffled skirt showing Director George Cukor how the stockings wrinkled at the ankle.

"Well, why didn't you get them small enough?" asked Cukor.

"I did," pleaded Claudette, "but I've lost weight practicing the can-can. My legs are almost three inches thinner."

Cukor turned to an assistant.

"Please announce," he said dryly, "that, to be fashionable, milady's legs should be three inches thinner this season."

". . . and I like that dress Yolanda wears when she dances with Veloz . . . It's so pretty . . . What, dear? . . . You'll get me a dress that looks like that? Sure I'll wear it—if you get me a guy who looks like Veloz."

12 P. M.: "Just write it this way—'Robert Irwin won't go to the electric chair,'" a municipal official assures at the Tavern . . . Carl Sandburg, who has just finished writing one million words about Lincoln, sits at Sardi's with Raymond Massey, who portrays Lincoln in the Sherwood play . . . Massey gives the waiter a $5 bill, and notices a picture of Lincoln on the note. "Wonderful," he elates, "what won't our publicity dept. do next?" . . . "Just a few weeks before my Mars broadcast," Orson Welles confides at the Casa Manana, "I took Mr. McNinch of the Fed. Com. Com. around the studio, and explained to him just how radio dramatizations are made realistic . . . And I've sent checks to the people who sent me bills for long-distance phone calls they said they made when my broadcast frightened them."

1 A. M.: "Think of it," Sinclair Lewis tells a young couple at Tony's, "last week I wangled a free sandwich out of Dorothy Thompson" . . . When Milton Berle is prevented from making his advertised guest-appearance at the Cotton Club, Billy Rose rushes the star entertainers from his own cafe to entertain at this rival night club . . . "Before 'Cradle Will Rock' was scheduled to open at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, the Coca-Cola company learned that one of the lines in the play is 'Give me a coke.' For almost a year the Coca-Cola Co. therefore sent cases of its product to that theater—never realizing that the show never opened there, because the Fed. Theater canceled it, and the Mercury took it over."

2 A. M.: "The N. Y. Central and other railroads will present a railroad pageant four times a day at the World's Fair," a producer informs at the St. Regis. "Kurt Weill will write the music for it" . . . "Incidentally," a song publisher reveals, "Weill's '3 Penny Opera' can be bought in Yorkville, where it's being imported from Germany. Although the Nazis have banned Weill's music for local consumption, they export it—for the money" . . . When five of Cuba's uniformed representatives at the Horse Show seat themselves at La Conga the band plays the Cuban anthem. All rise—except the Cuban quintet . . . "One of Lupe Velez's co-workers is squawking terribly," an agent declares at the Yumuri, "because in some of the scenes Lupe looks up at him—and spits."

3 A. M.: "When the President saw a performance of 'Knickerbocker Holiday,'" a producer states at El Rio, "he said that the play's Roosevelt is much more social than his real ancestor was. The President confessed that the wife of that early Roosevelt actually took in washing" . . . "And so when I went to vote Tuesday," Mrs. Heywood Broun reports at the Stork, "I came out of the booth and asked the officials, 'How do I vote for Lehman?' They told me, 'Lady, you can't. This is Stamford, Conn.!'" . . . "Richard Bennett can get a job in the movie '. . . one-third of a nation . . .'" a film official reports at the Yacht Club, "but he won't take it. They want him to be the voice of the Tenement House."

4 A. M.: "The director of California's $30-every-Thursday movement—which was defeated last week—was served last week," a Californian informs at the Intl. Casino. "A Los Angeles furniture store is suing him. The $30-every-Thursday leader is being sued for $28.75" . . . "Yes, I've come back from France," Louis Bromfield elates at El Morocco, "because this is the best spot in the world." . . . "Although Dave Selznick hasn't authorized him as yet to do it," a song writer states at the Kit Kat, "Lamar Stringfield, the Southern composer who won the Pulitzer Prize, is writing a complete score for "Gone With the Wind."

5 A. M.: "Do you know why there was such a shortage of Halloween masks this year?" a reporter queries at Lindy's. "Well, it's because 10,582 of these masks were bought up, at four cents each, to be used for the cyclorama in 'Danton's Death.'" . . . "H. H. Robinson, the steel man, attended that beefsteak dinner at which Knudsen of General Motors was present," a Detroit official informs at Reuben's. "Robinson is one of the great men of America. He said he'd contribute $500,000 to help bring some of the oppressed people in Germany to this country." . . . "Arthur William Brown, the artist, is illustrating a Saturday Eve. Post swing story," an editor relates at Dave's. "One of the characters is a suave, romantic band leader for whom the ladies fall. Well, Brown has selected his model—Bandleader Gus Martel, whose wife has a warrant out for him and who is suing him for divorce."

6 A. M.: "and I wish you were practicing law again, dear . . . Well, look at all the business you could get defending Orson Welles in those suits brought by people who were frightened by that Mars broadcast . . . What defense? It's simple. Just call it an Act of God."

A Darrin Car Slows Down Clark Gable

Chariot Stops Traffic
Women Stop Gable
Gable Stops Driving

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Nov. 15.—The automobile shows may be full of streamlined chariots, but mostly they look like 1922 models in comparison to the Darrin eight, a Hollywood motor car so ultra-ultra that Clark Gable made the serious mistake of buying one.

There wasn't anything wrong with the car, except that it looked like something from Mars, with yellow leather upholstery, a hood nearly 7 feet long and gadgets which did everything except freeze ice cubes. Is was such an automobile as nobody, anywhere, ever saw before.

And when the folks began seeing this vision of steel and cast aluminum, with Clark Gable, himself, in person, behind the wheel, they couldn't restrain themselves. Lady motorists formed parades behind Gable's car; lady pedestrians climbed into it at every stoplight. Gable stood that for a month, and then sold his super-super-super eight at a tremendous loss. He now drives an $800 coupe, painted black.

Liners on Wheels

The Darrin factory is on Sunset boulevard, near the Trocadero, and it usually has on display one or two automobiles so long, so low and so magnificent that they almost resemble transatlantic ocean liners on wheels.

We dropped in today, not to buy, but to learn from Howard Darrin something of the business of manufacturing automobiles de luxe for perhaps the flossiest trade in the world.

Darrin used to manufacture custom bodies in Paris for Rolls Royce automobiles during the lush twenties. He exported most of them to America, for such cistomers as Norma Shearer, Dietrich, Jack Warner and others in the big money.

"And then came 1929 and the custom automobile business simply disappeared," Darrin said. "Nobody in America even thought of importing a foreign car anymore. I grubbed for a living in hope the business would revive, but it didn't, so I decided it probably would be a good stunt to go to Hollywood, my best market, and design cars there on the spot and to order. It was a good stunt, too. In the last six months I've sold 15 automobiles, for $3,900 and up, mostly up."

Darrin buys the chassis of a medium-priced straight eight, as built in Detroit; then he installs upon it his stream-lined bodies. He makes them largely of solid aluminum castings, instead of sheet metal, and he equips the bodies as if they were being made for the Maharajah of Indore.

"And why not?" he asked. "I charge enough. I ought to make 'em good."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 14.—Everyone's happy that Charles Rogers is to do the "Star Maker" at his old stamping ground, Paramount.

HEDDA HOPPER

Bill LeBaron, Rogers, Bing Crosby and Gus Edwards combine glorious memories for all of us. Dollars to doughnuts Herr Lubitsch lands right back on the same lot, too. Why not, since he's made his greatest successes there?

For Myron Selznick's heart action, I'm glad he's given up his idea of producing. I should think allthose studded names on his list would be strain enough for him.

The new Tele-View Theater is equipped and ready to go on television. Hear they plan to pull off the first show Christmas Day.

For years you've enjoyed Alan Hale's acting. Now you can sit on him and do ditto. His new theater seat is that comfortable—and slides you back out of danger when feet are about to trample you. Alan should make a fortune on them. Who said actors weren't inventive?

Did I say Rudy Vallee was here with a girl friend? That was before I'd seen Caryl Gould, who's singing with his band. She's the nearest thing to Fay Webb I've ever beheld. She not only puts steam, but smoke, in your eyes. And already Hollywood is after her. Rudy picks 'em—we take 'em.

Chiding Leland Heywood because his wife, Margaret Sullavan, was having a baby instead of playing Scarlett, he said: "Don't be silly; she turned down Scarlett long before the baby was a glint in her eye. You should know Maggie's too smart to do that part. No matter who plays it, there'll be an avalanche of abuse from the fans."

Funny if Selznick isn't able to find an actress willing to take that chance. That would really be something!

The bidding is high for "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." It's gone to $90,000. If it's done in pictures, I have a sneaking feeling Katharine Hepburn will play the star part.

Louise Platt, who had lots of competition from Slicker, the seal, in "Spawn of the North," is reading the script for Republic's "Wagons Westward." In the meantime Jed Harris is here trying to persuade her to give up the whole thing. He has wedding bell trouble.

Everyone in the picture business should read Walter Wanger's article in the current Ken magazine. It's a pip.

Walter's a sucker for a sob story. While I was there the other day he handed out a $50 bill while his secretary grabbed his new topcoat and hid it in her closet. Later, I asked why. She said: "He's given three away so far this year, and he can't afford to lose another."

The new time clock punch and go system indulged in by all the players receiving less than $1,000 a week has brought about some silly situations. There's a place to punch when you take time out for nature. That's called "On the seats of the mighty." You punch for lunch, instead of throwing dice for it. That's called "Filling the cavity." And if you're called to the studio to discuss a part, you punch, not the producer if you do or don't get it, but a time clock.

You girls who want to look like Claudette Colbert and Carole Lombard will not be able to buy the same kind of clothes, for Travis Banton, who designed theirs, has joined Greer, and they'll have a plush opening November 28.

Luise Rainer is our most air-minded girl. She made 38 plane trips to and from New York this year. All in the interest of Odets. While separated she never went out with any other man. And never for a moment got him out of her mind. Sorry I didn't take a better look at that guy.

La Conga, since its air-conditioning, is getting the biggest play in town. "Rhumba with me at LaConga" is our password.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. C. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va
Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

Citizens of the town of Vienna yesterday decided they wanted neither water nor sewage systems within the corporate limits, especially when it entailed the issuance of $112,000 in town bonds. By a vote of 97 to 63 the bond issue proposed by the town council was defeated in the special election.

The polls were open from sunrise to sunset in the town hall with M. O. Bradford, G. Owens Berry and C. J. Tallman as judges. A total of 168 ballots were cast, and only 6 were void. About 178 persons were qualified to vote in this election.

Feeling between the two factions ran high throughout the day with both sides claiming victory. Each group had observers at the polls, and almost 30 persons were challenged as to their right to vote in the election.

The town barber was one of the victims of the challenges. A resident of the town for the past 15 years, he has voted in every election for the past 11 years. So intense was the feeling yesterday, his right to vote was questioned for the first time for not being a citizen of the United States. It was brought out that he would not receive his final naturalization papers until next month.

School Survey to Start

The State departmentof education will start a survey today of the Falls Church schools under the direction of George J. Oliver, of Richmond, State supervisor of secondary education. The survey was requested some months ago by the town school board.

It is expected the survey will possibly deal with the future status of the town as a separate school district from Fairfax County. The town was created a separate school district when it was chartered because the corporation was located in both Arlington and Fairfax counties. Since the withdrawal of the Arlington County section from the corporation the status of the schools in the remaining area in Fairfax County has been questioned.

Mrs. Albert Dunn directed a program of entertainment by the junior group.

The colored branch of the Alexandria Needlework Guild will hold its third annual display of new garments, with a program of entertainment on Friday evening in the Alfred Street Baptist Church, presided over by Mrs. Margaret E. Evans, the president, assisted by Mrs. Katie Nelson Skinner, secretary. The public is invited.

In accordance with a recent decision of the vestry, the four nominees receiving the largest number of votes will serve for three years, the next largest, two years, and the last four, one year, thereby establishing a rotating vestry, believing this policy will serve the best interest of the parish.

Lamond and Gilbert J Cox, two years, and Thomas E. Sebrell, jr., Joseph S. Blackwell, sr., A. Slater Lamond and Armistead L. Boothe, for terms of one year.

The only change to the commission's plans will be made in shifting the angle of the new structure to fit the western channel of the bay, Chief Engineer Nathan L. Smith announced.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Asks How to Reclaim Frivolous, Pleasure-Loving Fiancee From "Life of 'Swing?'"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I'm either a fool or a typical misunderstood man. The story gets off to the usual start: Boy meets girl, after which friendship, love and engagement develop in the order named. Then—enter discord. My work takes me away from Washington for long periods of time and, in spite of promises to write me every day, the girl comes through with only an occasional letter.

Our relationship seems to be ideal in every way so long as we are together. So far so good. But when we're apart, it seems to be something else again. And, in my belief, there is something wrong with that picture. Before departing on my first trip, I told the girl not to hibernate in my absence. Result: She continues to date this man and that one for whatever social affairs happen to appeal to her. Of this conduct she nonchalantly makes mention in her occasional letters; no details given, just glancing reference made.

When I return from said trips, I find her devotion unchanged (apparently), but I run into a whispering campaign which tells me my fiancee is a huge social success; a "jitterbug" and the life of every party. She has told me recently not to be so serious-minded; to live and laugh. What can I do to salvage my intended wife from a life of "swing" and a meaningless round of so-called good times? What can you say to a woman who is such a realist that her engagement ring takes on meaning only when the donor is present? Please advise me. B. P.

Unlikely Ambition.

DEAR B. P.: Judging from her behavior, this girl is too light minded to make a suitable wife for a man of your type. Your respective standards of values are too dissimilar to be reconcilable. Despite the existence of a strong mutual attraction—no doubt physical in essence—that has eventuated in your present engagement to be married, it is doubtful that you could pull together amicably in double-harness.

Her advice to you to "live and laugh," not to be "so serious-minded," tells a story of fundamental incompatibility of temperament already making itself significantly manifest. So, too, does your dismayed reaction to the news of that "huge social success" she enjoys (in every sense of the word) during your periodic absences from town. Not only is your pride, your sense of personal dignity, rather deeply wounded by such reports, but instinctively—and with some justification—you distrust the integrity of a woman who fluctuates with such easy versatility between the roles of devoted fiancee and playgirl-on-the-town!

This girl isn't head-over-heels in love with you by any manner of means. She has become engaged to you because she considers you "a good thing" in the way of matrimonial timber; too good, in fact, to be rejected so long as she hasn't a better bird in hand—and it is my opinion that she is holding on to you, in a negligent sort of way, while she beats the bushes in search of an alternate candidate who will more nearly approximate her specifications for the Beau Ideal.

The underlying purpose and real value of the engagement period is to discover to the tentatively contracting parties their essential fitness or unfitness to join forces in a lifetime partnership. When it develops, as in this case, that respective points of view and patterns of behavior do not dovetail; that the conduct and philosophy of one is incomprehensibly alien and painfully bruising to the other, there is only one foresighted thing to do, and that is to dissolve the tentative commitment. The futility of a woman's marrying a man with the intention of reforming him is axiomatic, and by the same token a man is tackling a lost cause in attempting such a feat with a woman.

In instances where man and wife of markedly dissimilar temperament and social habits achieve a harmonious union, it is usually because each has been genuinely desirous of acquiring the characteristics of the other—because each recognized in the other a leavening influence which would bring his own personality to its fullest flower. But I do not see that such mutual respect and admiration exists in this particular relationship. Neither sees in the other the complement of himself; rather you see in the woman a person who threatens your self-respect and sense of psychic security.

In my opinion there is nothing you might say to your fiancee which would convince her of the error, from your point of view, of her ways. I do not believe it is within your power to "salvage (her) from a life of 'swing' and a meaningless round of so-called good times." The only man of your particular type who could render her that service would be a man whom she loved so defenselessly that she did not dare invite his displeasure; or so completely that she thought only of furthering his happiness by anticipating his wish and doing his will. And as I have already said, it is pretty plain that she does not love you in such a fashion. The best advice I can give you is this—either muffle your objections to her frivolity and take your chances with her "as is," or dissolve the engagement by mutual consent on grounds of mutual incompatibility. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's Woman Page.

High Hair Takes to Fur Bonnets

Diminutive fur fluffs are taking to the most decorative heads these windy fall days. Not only are tiny toques and bonnets of fur appropriate for first wearings of fur coats but they express the spirit of National Fur Week which is being celebrated locally. There may be spots before your eyes due to the coquettish visor cap of leopard (above) with green felt trim and back crown, but if you want to be strikingly groomed, it will command attention

One of the most flattering of the recent furred hat themes is the fur pinwheel which is becoming to almost every type and age. Above—A black felt bonnet halos the face with a coronet of sable dyed skunk. Narrow black velvet streamers hang down the back in the manner of little French housemaid's caps. Most glamorous of the fur-bearing hats is the cap of ermine (left). A jeweled comb slashes through the fur to hold the coiffure snugly

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 15.

WHEN A few people of our certain age—"between the dark and the daylight," or neither very young or very old—get together, we love to remember. It's the way of humans. We get around the piano and sing old songs—we reminisce about old pets of the stage and now Mr. George Kaufman and Mr. Moss Hart have put this warm impulse on the stage in "The Fabulous Invalid," the play now running pretty well at the Broadhurst.

ALICE HUGHES

The boys have hung this nostalgia binge on the immorality of the theater—its ability to withstand the shocks of movies, radio, cheap entertainment, public apathy, actors' strikes and all its other woes. It's a big yet cute show—but the warm thing about it is that live human ghosts move throughout the play, often in roles so tiny that they are no more than a flash. They sing a few bars of old songs, or play little roles—and they are not old save in the theater sense. Jack Norworth, great vaudevillian and husband of Norah Bayes, playing an old stage doorman. Charles King, noted song and dance man. Little Bobbe Arnst, once a "Follies" mite and the first Mrs. Johnny Weismuller. Elsa Ersi, blonde baby doll from Hungary whose entrance music was "The Merry Widow Waltz." They all pass in and out of the show—singing dear old song hits dating back as far as 30 years.

A great sentimental orgy, this "Fabulous Invalid." The theater doesn't die—ever. And as if to prove it, bright boys and girls appear all evening. They are almost too happy, for they are actually acting, right there on a stage, before a crowd of people. That's why the theater will never die. Ardent young people will never let it! You'll like this show.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I'll never really understand the impulse that makes all sorts of men and women—not merely moonstruck kids—push and shove and gape at a movie actor. It seems incredibly silly. The other night, in the Broadhurst lobby, Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Brien were taking the air and a cigarette. And I saw ladies in costly mink and gents in swallow-tail coats knocking each other around just for a chance to stare vulgarly at Pat, who is a nice boy, but no dream man. Yet these plush boors were as pop-eyed as though he were one of Orson Welles' monsters from Mars. What in the world does this to people, anyway?

No less than six girls who have recently worked, or who toil now, for the country's most famous department store have just published books. They are Margaret Devereaux, Margaret Fishback, Margarette Byers, Kay Austin, Emily Van Brussell and Edna Taft. What is there about that hive? I used to write fashion ad copy there myself—but the book bug hadn't bitten the store yet, I suppose. And now I try to do too many other things.

Toby Wing, the little blonde minx from Hollywood, is leaving the musical show, "You Never Know," which stars Libby Holman and Whoopee Velez—and who should be taking her place but June Havoc, sister of Gypsy Rose Lee, the gorgeous burlesque girl who worked in Hollywood under her own name of Louise Hovick! Gyps, by the way, is back on the stage removing garments in her ladylike way and packing them in.

Your Figure

Take It Easy in Housework, Women Are Advised

Small Fatiguing Chores Do Not Beautify
Only Tasks That Use Big Muscles Help
Periodic Rests Are Wrinkle Antidote

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF HOUSEWORK were exercise we would all be streamlined. The trouble is that housework makes you tired instead of beautiful, and something has to be done about it.

When you analyze your household tasks you can see that they divide themselves into two groups: those that use the small muscles, and those that use the large muscles. Now, we know that the greatest exchange of energy takes place in the muscles, and it follows that the tasks which use the large muscles are the most reducing. It has been proven that even a moderate use of these large muscles easily involves a greater expenditure of energy than the most intense use of the smaller muscles.

From all this, there is only one conclusion to be drawn—the smart housewife saves herself as much as possible on the tedious and tiring tasks so that she has the energy left over only for the exercise that stimulates the circulation and promotes health.

Don't Stoop

None of these tasks using the small muscles, however tiring they may be, is of the slightest value as exercise. Washing dishes three times a day uses the small muscles only. Ironing uses the small muscles to a greater extent and leaves you feeling fatigued, but you can cut down the effort required for both by sitting on a stool at the sink or ironing board. Also, it is very important that ironing boards, tables, sinks and tubs be the right height for you. You should not have to stoop over your work.

Since the housewife does have to stand a good part of the time, the best shoes—not loose-fitting bedroom slippers or broken down shoes that do not support the arches—should be worn. It pays any housewife to invest in a pair of comfortable shoes with heels that are right. Ill-fitting shoes cause fatigue and wrinkles.

Another fatigue and wrinkle chaser is the plan of taking 10 to 15 minutes to lie down before you are worn to a frazzle. And when you have been on your feet quite a bit, lie with them propped higher than your head.

Some housework does use the trunk muscles and you can get exercise out of it. In hanging clothes on a line, the upward stretching to reach a line that is a bit high exercises some of the muscles. Bedmaking can involve bending from the waist, with the tummy held up, and it helps to slim you down. Any work constitutes some exercise as long as you hold your figure in proper alignment.

No matter how you look at it, however, housework is not exercise. You might work hard all day and still not benefit as much as from 15 minutes workout with exercises for the muscles of the abdomen, waist, hips and chest. In addition you need the invigorating effects of a straightaway walk. You should step out briskly and walk for at least 30 minutes. Your figure and health will benefit from such a program and you must plan your day so that you are not too tired to carry it out.

The Rumble Seat

MRS. BLINK—Now just so there won't be any argument, I want it distinctly understood that I'm the one who's going to ride in the rumble seat.

COUSIN SUSIE—You are not! I'm simply crazy about rumble seats. They make me feel so young.

MRS. BLINK—Yes, but you're company. We couldn't think of letting you ride in the rumble seat. It would simply disgrace us before all the neighbors.

SISTER—Mama, I wanta ride in the rumble seat.

MRS. BLINK—Be still. You're too little—

GRANDMA—If anybody rides in the rumble seat, I'm going to be the one. I can sit back there with Sister—

MRS. BLINK—No, that's simply ridiculous—

GRANDMA—So you think I'm too old—

MRS. BLINK—That isn't the point at all. Think how it would look! My mother-in-law in the rumble seat!

COUSIN SUSIE—Really, I'm simply mad about rumble seats—

MRS. BLINK—You can't ride back there with your good clothes and everything. The thing to do is for me to take Sister and ride in the rumble seat—

GRANDMA—Well I simply won't go if you ride back there. Think what everybody would say—me riding up in front with Tom, and you in the rumble seat!

MR. BLINK—For heavens' sakes, settle this some way. It's getting late.

COUSIN SUSIE—Now please let me say something. I don't care at all what the neighbors say.

MRS. BLINK—Well we do. Besides with your new wave set—

SISTER—Please Mamma. I wanta ride in the rumble seat.

COUSIN SUSIE—Say this is what I could do! I could wear a veil to keep my hair from blowing. Oh I've got it! If you had a heavy black veil nobody'd ever know which one of us it was—

GRANDMA—No the really sensible thing is for you girls to sit up in front and for me to sit in the rumble seat—

MRS. BLINK—Yes, and you know what every neighbor in the block would be saying! I tell you I won't go if you ride in the rumble seat. Now I'm the one—

GRANDMA—Well I won't go if you ride back there.

MR. BLINK—Say, why don't you all sit up front and let me ride in the rumble seat?

MRS. BLINK—Say, we might do that! And I could drive!

GRANDMA—Still wouldn't it look sort of funny to see a bunch of women up there driving and Tom back there alone?

COUSIN SUSIE—I could sit back there with Tom.

GRANDMA—No you'd ruin your clothes—and your wave set. Say, why don't I sit back there with Tom?

MRS. BLINK—That'd look worse than ever—as if I made both of you sit back there.

MR. BLINK—Well we've got to settle this some way quick.

COUSIN SUSIE—I WISH you'd let me ride back there. I tell you I'm simply mad—

MRS. BLINK—No, I won't have your wave set ruined. The only thing is for me—

MR. BLINK—Do we have to go through all that again?

GRANDMA—I think we can all crowd in front. Susie can sit in my lap. She's light as a feather.

COUSIN SUSIE—No, really I'm heavy as lead—

MRS. BLINK—No, Susie can sit on MY lap.

MR. BLINK—Who is going to straddle the brakes?

MRS. BLINK—Well I will—only then I couldn't hold Susie.

GRANDMA—I can hold Susie.

COUSIN SUSIE—Oh no, I'd mash you. You sit on MY lap—

MRS. BLINK—No Susie can hold Sister,—no, then she'd have to straddle the brakes—Tom, what on earth are you doing?

MR. BLINK—I'm going to settle this thing. We're going to draw lots.

Debutantes at Party of Mrs. Caldwell Surpass Flowers There in Beauty

Misses Cotter Are Guests of Honor They Will Bow at a Tea Dance Jan. 2 Both Dressed Alike in Dubonnet Frocks

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

A BEVY OF BUDS assembled at luncheon yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club surpassed in beauty the masses of white chrysanthemums and Easter lilies decorating the long table. The party—one of the first big debutante luncheons of the season—was given by Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell for the Misses Margaret and Claire Cotter, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter.

Constituting one of the three sister-acts in this season's debuting whirl, the Misses Cotter will make their formal bows at a tea dance at the Mayflower on January 2.

Yesterday's party was attended by many sweet young things who will be formally presented this season, as well as a few who have elected to bow later, if at all, and a few who are coming out at a series of small, informal parties.

The F Street Club, taken over by Mrs. Caldwell for the day, was transformed into a bower of white blossoms, a fitting and lovely setting for a debutante party. The hostess, greeting her guests at the door of the drawing room, wore a frock of French blue duvetine, fashioned on simple lines with a V neckline, and a broad-brimmed hat of Schiaparelli pink suede.

Guests of Honor Dressed Alike

Standing with her were the guests of honor, who were dressed alike in frocks of Dubonnet wool crepe, set off with gold belts and worn with Dubonnet feather turbans, lovely and extremely effective. Gardenia corsages were added touches to their stunning ensembles. Mrs. Cotter had chosen a wine-colored suit trimmed in sable, with a hat to match.

Miss Margaret Cotter, who recently returned from New York where she tied for a blue ribbon at the National Horse Show, is one of the Capital's topflight equestrian stars; and on all sides yesterday she was answering queries about the exhibition at Madison Square Garden.

While the debutantes found their places at the long table especially arranged for them, the hostess and Mrs. Cotter with a small group of additional guests, including Mrs. Lipscomb Jamieson, of Manassas, Va., were seated at another table. The F Street Club, which is noted for delicious menus, never turned out a better one than that selected for yesterday's party. Cream of mushroom soup was followed with broiled chicken, wild rice, green beans and brandied peaches, topped off nicely with delicious rolls. Then came spring salad; and after that, ice cream with strawberry sauce and coffee.

Covers Laid For 22 Guests

"Well, this is one deb luncheon where we haven't had chicken patties and peas for the main course of a mousse for dessert," one guest gratefully observed. And the others agreed down to the last bud.

In the company that lingered at the party until midafternoon were the Misses Dorothy and Madeline Cotter, sisters of guests of honor; Miss Doris Becker, Miss Elsie Hill, Miss Barbara Henning, Miss Agnes Magruder, Miss Jacqueline Meredith, Miss Sylvia Alexander, Miss Elizabeth Meyers, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Marjorie Sherley, Miss Julie Cahill, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Ashby Proctor.

Also Miss Mary Boyden, Miss Margaret Jeschke, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Gladys Carter, Miss Elizabeth Langlais and Miss Mary Catherine Mundell.

Lady Lindsay Holds Tea for Miss Alma Kisch

Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, entertained at a small tea yesterday afternoon. Among the guests was Miss Alma Royalton Kisch, of London, a niece of Sir Cecil Kisch, British Undersecretary of State for India.

Miss Kisch, who is an autnority on housing, will leave today for a speaking tour, returning to the Capital next month. She is staying at the Roosevelt.

The Ambassador and Lady Lindsay will entertain at a small dance December 2, at the embassy.

Sylvia Alexander's Debut Tomorrow

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Carter, of Philadelphia, will arrive today to attend the debut tomorrow of Mrs. Carter's sister, Miss Sylvia Alexander.

The debutante, whose family has been prominent in Capital society ever since there was a Capital, will be presented at a tea at the home of her mother, and that evening will entertain the young girls assisting her at the semi-weekly dinner-dance at the Chevy Chase Club. Another sister, Miss Louise Alexander, will give a dinner for her on Friday before the Supper Club dance at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. William Henry Sills, of Chicago, will be matron of honor, and the bridesmaids are Miss Jean Goss and Mrs. Murray Borden, of Washington; Miss Margaret Miller and Miss Elizabeth Campbell, of Sewickley, Pa.; Mrs. Frank V. Hammett, of Englewood, N. J., and Mrs. Robert Ingham, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

BACK TO WASHINGTON for the season have come Mr. and Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, sr., who have issued cards for a party celebrating their golden wedding anniversary on November 21. They have closed their estate, Oakley, near Upperville, Va., and have reopened their town house on Wyoming avenue.

One of the pillars of the hunt country, Mr. Dulany for years has bred and raised on his Virginia farm some of the best race horses in the country and, for the size of his stables has had more winners than any other man in America.

MISS AUSTINE McDONNELL, of Warrenton, who is currently a bird in a gilded cage at the Heigh-Ho where she has joined the long list of society warblers, was "guest of honor" at a unique party given for her by Frank Littleton, jr. Mrs. Roosevelt is expected to return Friday from a tour of the Middle West. On a recent stop in Cincinnati she paid a visit to another lady lecturer, her cousin, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. The late Mr. Longworth originally came from Cincinnati and his widow keeps up the family home there.

On the afternoon of her return Mrs. Roosevelt will receive Senora de Somoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua, who has returned for a brief visit to the Capital. She has been in New York since her stay at the Nicaraguan Legation here early in the autumn. She will leave Saturday to fly back to Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de De Bayle will give a dinner tomorrow for Senora de Somoza, who is staying at the legation.

The New Social List For This Year Out

A sure sign that the social season is really getting under way is the annual appearance of Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner's book, "The Social List of Washington," another volume of which has just been issued.

This book, with its green suede cover and gold lettering, lists the names, addresses and telephone numbers of diplomats, officials, and members of residential society.

In addition, there are precedence rules for harried Capital hostesses; forms that tell you how to answer and write invitations, and instruction as to how to address those of official rank.

Mrs. William B. Bankhead and Mrs. Wade Ellis head the list of patronesses for the "Social List." Other patronnesses include Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Robert D. W. Connor, Mrs. Emery Scott Land, Mrs. John H. Magruder, Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. Armistead Peter 3d, Mrs. Lowry B. Stephenson, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend and Mrs. John R. Williams.

Miss Gudger to Make Debut on December 20

Capt. and Mrs. Emmet Carlyle Gudger have issued invitations to a tea dance December 20, at which their daughter, Miss Elinor Carlyle Gudger, will make her bow to society.

Miss Gudger, who is studying at Mount Holyoke College, will arrive here next week to spend Thanksgiving with her parents.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

USUALLY the visit to Washington of an important official of another country is heralded in advance with much fanfare and yards of newspaper type. Hence why all the secrecy about the supposedly forthcoming arrival of Premier Mackenzie King of Canada? Neither the State Department nor the Canadian legation would "give out" yesterday when questioned about the rumor that he's coming, but certain it is that the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, has issued invitations to a luncheon in his honor on Friday at the Carlton.

DUDLEY HARMON.

YESTERDAY'S front page story that Attorney General Homer S. Cummings was expected to resign at any moment may or may not be true, but the Cummings are planning to be here for the next few weeks, anyway. Mrs. Cummings will motor back from a stay in Stanford with Mrs. Emily Lovell, of New York and Greenwich, who will be her guest over Thanksgiving. Mr. and Mrs. Cummings celebrated the latter's birthday recently with dinner at the Colony Club in New York with the Gene Tunneys, and later supper in the Sert room of the Plaza.

A debutante who is taking the "coming-out" process very calmly is Miss Agnes Magruder, daughter of Commander and Mrs. John Magruder. One of her main interests is art and she loves travel. She is looking forward to accompanying her mother to China, where Commander Magruder has been named to head the flagship Augusta. He will leave in February, but Mrs. Magruder has not yet decided when she will join him. Their daughter, by the way, is one of the prettiest of the year's debs, with dark curly hair and regular features.

The Magruders entertained at a small cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their attractive home on Wyoming avenue. Guests assembled in the upstairs drawing room, and there was actually a place for everyone to sit down, which is news. Mrs. Magruder, who looks amazingly young to be the mother of a deb, wore a turquoise blue tea gown.

IT BECOMES extremely difficult to recognize even one's close friends in the new hats. Their features look very different behind drooping veils or a mass of feathers. Mrs. Anthony Coleby and Mrs. John Caswell were among those yesterday who had gone in for the new bonnets, and theirs were very dashing.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock were also among the guests. We saw Miss Marion Trumbull, in black frock and high red hat, chatting with Edward Gardner; Mrs. Emmons Smith sitting on the stairs with Kurt Hetzel; Mrs. Wallach Merriam in conversation with Countess de Gramont, whose brother and sister-in-law, M. and Mme. Dmitri Negroponte, were also at the party; Mrs. Marshall Exnicios in a stunning pirate model mustard colored hat with a black frock; Wolcott Waggaman, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik—Mr. Prochnik, by the way, is giving lectures on politics at several leading universities these days; Mrs. Mondell Gregg in a rust colored frock, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell and M. and Mme. Charles Lucet.

Commander and Mrs. Magruder and Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., will leave tomorrow to visit Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver at the house which they have taken in Southern Pines, N. C., for the winter. The Magruders will present their daughter at a tea December 3.

VISCOUNTESS MERSEY, who with her son is visiting Clarence Hewes, is being feted high wide and handsome during her stay. Last evening former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham gave a dinner for her and today Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney is entertaining at luncheon in her honor.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES DICK, who have been honeymooning in Bermuda, will leave today for their new home in Texas. They have been visiting Mrs. Dick's mother, Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt, and Mr. Pavenstedt. Their wedding took place last month in New York.

Chileans Fete Bolivian Envoy

The Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus entertained at cocktails yesterday afternoon from 6 to 7:30 at their home on Waterside drive in honor of the Bolivian Minister, Dr. Luis Gauchalla.

Dr. Gauchalla will leave next week for New York to sail November 26 for Peru, with Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull and other members of the Pan-American conference.

Also honored at the party was the sister of the Bolivian Minister, Senora de Diez de Medina, wife of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is visiting the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos until she sails with her mother for Peru.

Among the guests were the Mexican Ambassador, Francisco Castillo Najera; the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos; the Uruguayan Minister and Mme. Riching; the Mexican Counselor and Senora de Quintanilla; the Argentine Counselor and Senora de Ghiraldo; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes; Col. Pedro Zanni, the Argentine Military Attache and Senora de Zanni, the Secretary of the Colombian Legation and Senora de Vargas.

Miss Frost to Meet D. C. Literary Circles

Miss Lesley Frost, daughter of the poet, Robert Frost, will be the guest Tuesday afternoon, November 22, of Mr. and Mrs. August King-Smith, who are inviting members of artistic and literary circles of Washington to meet her.

Miss Frost, though quite young, has published several volumes of stories. Her latest is a work of Christmas poems entitled "Come Christmas." She is making her home in Washington this winter where she is associate director and head of the creative writing and English departments of the Kin-Smith Studio School.

Italy American Society Meets

The Charge d'Affaires of the Italian Embassy, Signor Guiseppe Cosmelli, and Signora Cosmelli were present last evening at a meeting of the Italy American Society at the Mayflower Hotel. Maj. James Strachey Barnes, author and traveler, spoke on "The Munich Conference and Il Duce's Move for Peace" in an attempt to try and explain some of the many confusing points of view in the present European situation. He was introduced by Col. George B. McClellan, president of the society.

The meeting marked the beginning of the tenth year of the society in Washington. A buffet supper followed Maj. Barnes' address.

Among others present were the Counselor for Emigration, Signor Eugenio Bonardelli, and Signora Bonardelli; the Secretary of the Embassy, Count Guerino Roberti, and Signora Roberti, and Nobile Benedetto Capomazza dei Marchesi di Campolattare.

Also Col. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem, Col. and Mrs. Joseph R. Cecil, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Baroness von Below, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Matthew de Laney, Miss Bertha Noyes, Miss Alys Downing, Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. F. Cuniberti, Mr. and Mrs. Lothro Stoddard, Miss Janet Richards, Gen. John Philip Hill, Mgr. Francesco Lardone, Edward A. Harriman and Col. John Powell Hains.

Jury Hears King

W. Lawson King, Gaithersburg farmer and garage owner, was one of the witnesses before the Montgomery County grand jury yesterday at Rockville. It was understood that he appeared to press charges of assault and battery against County Commissioner Clay Plummer, also of Gaithersburg.

Three employes of King's garage, where Plummer and King engaged in fisticuffs Monday, also were in the witness line.

Justice of the Peace Charles W. Stang yesterday set December 9 as hearing date on a warrant charging assault and battery sworn out by King and naming Plummer as defendant. Commissioner Plummer was released on personal bond after he surrendered to Judge Stang.

The fight started at King's garage. Both men were antiorganization Democrats until several months ago, when Plummer aligned himself with the United Democratic Party.

A campaign to collect delinquent taxes in Montgomery County has netted approximately $8,100 in recent months, the board of county commissioners was told yesterday by representatives of Wooden & Benson, Baltimore accounting firm which is completing an audit of county accounts.

In one of its last official acts before leaving office next month, the board, all five of the members of which will retire to private life, voted to sell $420,000 in county bonds to John Nuveen & Co. of Baltimore. The bonds are selling at par and $200,000 will bear interest at 4½ per cent while $220,000 are to bear interest at the rate of 2¾ per cent. Of the total issue floated, $230,000 is to be used for school construction and $190,000 to refund maturing obligations of the county.

Election Discussed

The effect of the Democratic Party harmony movement on the election was described by J. Bond Smith, Takoma Park political leader, before meetings of the Takoma Park Women's Democratic Organization Club and the Takoma Park Women's Democratic Club yesterday.

Smith said the large number of "split" tickets in Takoma Park indicated anti-organization Democrats in the town were not in harmony with organization leaders. He urged women in both clubs to work together. He said there should be no split ballots.

Delegates from the Women's Democratic Organization Club will be the president, Mrs. Robert Lyddane and Mrs. Frederick C. Burr. From Mrs. Latimer's club there will be Mrs. Arthur L. Reynolds and Mrs. Latimer as delegates and Mrs. James Knowlan and Mrs. Helen Davis as alternates.

Educator Honored

DR. SIDNEY B. HALL,

Virginia State superintendent of public instruction, received from the Sons of Confederate Veterans today an engraved certificate of citation for services he has rendered the organization and for general good citizenship. Gov. Price recently received a similar citation

Lack of Cash Perils Schools At Greenbelt

May Close Jan. 1
FSA May Give Aid

Greenbelt, Md., children will be without schooling after January 1 unless the Farm Security Administration provides funds for operation of the two ultramodern school buildings at the "model" town by that date, it was learned yesterday.

A member of the Prince Georges County board of education, which is operating the schools, revealed that no more county funds would be available after January 1. He pointed out that for two months the county had been operating the schools at an approximate cost of $3,000 a month.

An agreement providing for Farm Security Administration payments to the county for all public services, including schools, is pending, but school officials pointed out no assurance is given as to when payments will start.

In the meantime, it was pointed out, the county will be without funds to continue operation of the schools.

The agreement provides for the payment by the FSA of about $39,000 to the county for public services this year. Last year the FSA paid $26,000 for operation of the elementary system alone. No payments were made for other public services.

Drive on Slot Machines

The arrest of slot machine operators was ordered yesterday by the Prince Georges County police commissioners in instructions sent to Police Superintendent Arthur W. Hepburn.

Despite a grand jury ban on the coin devices, which was to have become effective November 1, a number of the machines were still in operation yesterday.

Police said they expected to get rid of all the machines by the last of the week. About 50 per cent of them have already been removed, Superintendent Hepburn said.

The machines were ruled illegal last summer by the Maryland Court of Appeals. State's Attorney Alan Bowie, however, took no action until the grand jury last month submitted its recommendation for removal of the devices.

At that time he issued orders for their removal by November 1. Many of the machines have been taken out volantarily since then, but no action has been taken against operators who still continue to operate the devices.

Council Gives Thanks

The Greenbelt, Md., town council has issued a Thanksgiving proclamation giving thanks "that neither race prejudice, nor religious bigotry, nor class distinctions divide our neighborly relations."

Adopted on motion of Louis Bessemer, member of the council and former mayor, the resolution further states that the "council gives recognition to the fact that Greenbelt citizens are particularly thankful for the spirit of tolerance and good will which exists between the Federal Government and the local community"

Carroll Property Sought

The Prince Georges County Commissioners, at their meeting in Upper Marlboro yesterday, opened negotiations with Archbishop Michael J. Curly, of the Baltimore Archdiocese, for purchase of part of the estate of John Carroll, first Catholic bishop in America. The land is needed for construction of additions to the courthouse.

The proposed new additions will cost approximately $150,000, 45 per cent of which will be financed by the WPA. Plans also are under way for construction of a $150,000 service building in Hyattsville, Md., to house certain county branch offices. This project also will be carried with assistance of a PWA grant.

Teach Value Of Democracy, P.-T. A Urged

Md. Convention Opens
State Head Speaks
Hagerstown Is Host

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 15.—Children must be taught the value of democracy if it is to be successful, Mrs. G. R. Clements, president of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, said today.

Speaking at the twenty-third annual convention of the organization, Mrs. Clements said:

"Whether we are to hold on to our citizenship or not depends first of all upon how we live with each other in our homes.

"Until they begin to be democratic units and until all the institutions in which people live and work, adopt and make use of democratic practices and democratic techniques, we shall not bring up a generation of people who can carry on the larger aspects of the state and Nation upon a democratic basis."

Democracy, Mrs. Clements said, "is probably the most nearly ideal form of government yet conceived, but it will never be secure unless guided by honest and intelligent thinking."

Mayor W. Lee Elgin of Hagerstown welcomed the delegates and praised them for their work among school children and in elevating school standards.

Mrs. Pettengill this afternoon led a panel discussion on the topic, "How Can Teacher Training in Good Citizenship Contribute to Our Schools," in which a number of leading educators participated. Dr. J. D. Blackwell, of Salisbury State Teachers' College, said it is just as important to prepare for fellowship as leadership, while Dean K. Forrest Free, of Western Maryland College, advocated proper habits of health as contributing to good citizenship training.

Dismissal Hour Discussed

The congress also discussed a more uniform dismissal hour for Maryland schools, many of which close at 3 p. m., while others at late as 4 p. m.

Others who joined in the discussion were Dr. Henry I. Stahl, of Hood College; Miss Stella E. Brown, of Towson State Teachers' College; Dr. Henry Brechbill, of the University of Maryland, and Dr. John Dunkle, of Frostburg State Teachers' College.

Girl Scouts from the local troop are serving as ushers during the convention.

Mrs. G. R. Clements, president of the Maryland congress, presided at the sessions today. Speaking at the opening session, Mrs. Clements said the people have not been practicing the kind of citizenship that will insure continuance of a democracy.

Mrs. Sylvester J. Gower, is president of the host Washington County Council.

The annual banquet was held tonight with Mrs. Pettengill as speaker.

A demonstration, "A Maryland Congress Unit at Work," will be one of the features of tomorrow morning's session with Mrs. Stanley G. Cook presiding. In the afternoon Mrs. Milton D. Moore, of Hagerstown, first vice president, will preside, when a panel discussion on "How the High School Parent-Teacher Association May Contribute to Good Citizenship" will be held.

Living High

High living makes for slothful ease—
A real misfortune, if you please.
—Old Mother Nature.

Most folks wouldn't consider it a misfortune. No indeed. But old Mother Nature does. She knows full well that those who live in too much ease seldom are at their best. So her children in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows seldom are allowed to have things too easy. They must work for what they get and at nearly all times must be alert and watchful. There are exceptions, of course. There are exceptions to all rules. I suppose that Johnny Chuck and some of the others who sleep all winter may be said to be living in slothful ease. If so, they don't know it, and so no harm is done. And when they awake in the spring they will have to scramble and scrabble for a living.

Jimmy Skunk and the members of his family, Bobby Coon and his family, and Robber the Rat and his family were living high. Yes, sir, they were living high. They were getting all they wanted to eat of the very best kind of food without the trouble of working for it. All they had to do was to go into Aunt Sally's and help themselves from the pans of food she took delight in preparing for them. They didn't even have to travel in order to get this, for they had all moved in under the house for the winter. All they did was eat and sleep, and quarrel among themselves. Most people with nothing that they must do are likely to quarrel. It is the only means of excitement.

Robber the Rat and his family had dug holes to get under the house. They preferred their own private entrances to using the one that Jimmy Skunk had dug and that was now used by both Skunks and Coons. You see Robber and his family were distrustful of their larger neighbors and would have no more to do with them than was necessary. Time had been, and not so long ago, when Robber would have kept a good distance between himself and Bobby Coon and Jimmy Skunk. Yes, sir, he would so. And this was especially true of Rober's children. A hungry Coon or Skunk is no sort of a neighbor for a Rat to have, especially a young one.

But now Robber and all the other Rats were living on terms of something almost like intimacy with Bobby Coon and Jimmy Skunk and their families. The later were not exactly friendly but they were tolerant. This means that they made no effort to attack Robber and his relatives. They permitted a certain amount of freedom to come and go and even to eat from the food pans with no more than an occasional warning growl.

This wasn't friendliness. Robber the Rat understood this perfectly. Robber may be bad but he is smart. Bad people have to be smart. He explained it to the young Rats.

"It isn't that they have changed," said he. "They haven't. They haven't changed a bit. It is just that they have all that they want to eat with no trouble at all. And because they have plenty they don't care if we have some with them. But beware! Don't trust them. Don't get in the way of one of them. Don't get too close."

So life became a very simple matter with the patrons of the Woodhouse Night Club. They were living high with nothing to do but eat and sleep. Between Bobby Coon's family and Jimmy Skunk's family there was no more friendliness than there would have been had they met outside as total strangers, but they were too smart to allow their feelings to lead them into a fight inside that woodhouse. There was a great deal of growling and stamping of feet but no more. You see there was a great deal of mutual respect, but perhaps also a feeling that fighting might end this easy life. As for Robber and his family they were ignored by the others. They always had been scorned as outcasts and still were. But they didn't mind. They had no pride and having no pride the scorn of the others meant nothing at all to them. For the time being they were living high and that was all that mattered.

Second-Quarter Pass Gives Tech a 6 to 0 Victory

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"My Dear Mr. Povich: Kindly move over and let me put my 2 cents worth into the mess. I've been residing in Washington for the past three and a half years, and ever since I have been marvelling at the fine sense of sportsmanship that is ever evident in this so-called cosmopolitan town.

POVICH.

(Editor's note—Hm-mm. Somehow I am getting the impression that our correspondent is attempting to be nice in a horrid sort of way.)

"A few days after I arrived here, I went over to Griffith Stadium to watch a baseball game and was simply overwhelmed the way the fans cheered the home team. It's great to hear fans yell and cheer for a team that they know is not a pennant contender. But, and here's my first squawk, no matter how hard the opposing team played and even though the opposing team made one fine play after another, there wasn't one single peep out of the eight or nine thousand fans in the park. Not one acknowledgment of a fine play.

"Where I come from, any play, whether made by our team or by our opponents, is applauded and acclaimed. After all isn't that why fans go to a game, to see fine plays by the supposedly best team? But Washington fans don't give the other side as much as a timble. Washington sportsmanship? Brrrraaaccckkk!

(Ed. Note—Stop, you're breaking my heart. I always thought home-town fans went to ball games to see the home-town team win.)

Another gripe of mine comes from continually reading about Clark Griffith's nickname, "the Old Fox." You sports writers are forever calling him that. Perhaps I should be carted away in a straightjacket but will someone kindly show me how he ever acquired said name? Just to name one lucrative trade: He traded Buck Newsom and Ben Chapman for Wes and Rick Ferrell and Melo Almada.

(Ed. Note—Mr. Griffith has promised he would scream if somebody mentioned that trade just one more time.)

"Ferrell, once a great pitcher, had what you writers lovingly called a 'nothing ball.' Why? Well, sir, every time he would up and tossed that nothing ball to a batter, the batter would swing and the catcher would catch . . . nothing. Simple, isn't it?

"Mel Almada was a fine up-and-coming ball player, roamed the outfield far and wide and had one of the finest throwing arms in baseball, so what did Mr. Griffith do but trade him last year for Sammy West, who was a great ball player . . . about nine years ago.

(Editorial note—At the time of that trade, Sammy West was hitting .325, Almada was hitting .285.)

"Newsom wasn't much. All he did was win 20 ball games last year for the worst team in the majors. Ben Chapman is going great guns for Boston. The papers beat the drums for the Old Fox when he traded Joey Kuhel For Zeke Bonura. What a stel. What a trade. And to get back to my first bleat, what did the sportsmen attending the game do when Zeke was in his prolonged batting slump? Why, they cheered him . . . with their tongues between their teeth!

(Ed. Note—A quaint old American custom, sometimes referred to as an inalienable right.)

"Then take Buddy (Make an Error) Lewis . . . you take him, I'm ill. You sportswriters in Washington are calling him the best third baseman in the league. Why, he couldn't oil Red Rolfe's glove . . .

(Ed. Note—Manager Joe McCarthy preferred Lewis as his third baseman on the American League's All-Star team.)

"And now Football. Washington's fans are without a shadow of a doubt the worst fans in existence today. Oh, when the Redskins win, there's no talking to them: It's Sammy Baugh this and Turk Edwards that and Andy Frakis which and blah, blah, blah. Sure they're all good, that's why they're playing in the National Football League! But to say that the Redskins have the best players in the league is a lie.

(Ed. Note—Smile when you say that, stranger. And nobody has taken the Redskins championship as yet.)

"Hasn't Ed Danowski a better passing record this year than Baugh? I'll admit that last year Baugh was excellent and his record this year isn't so bad, but Danowski has been pitching strikes year after year. Washington fans argue that they are laying for Baugh this year; what the heck do you think that the players do upon seeing Danowski or White or Parker about to chuck a pass? Wait for him to let it go and then swarm in? Will a Washington sportsman listen to reason? In a pig's eye, he will.

"Andy Farkas is a second Cliff Battles, and there's no better man in the league. Nuts. Give me Ace Parker or Whizzer White. I've never seen Parker being shaken out of position so that another man can catch a pass in the end zone as happened in the Redskins-Giants game a few weeks ago. Andy can lug that ball, but a second Battles? Please don't make me laugh.

"And now the writers and the fans are roaring over the game in Chicago where those nasty-wasty Bears roughed up the itsy-bitsy Redskins and that's why the Redskins lost. Baloney!

Count Arthur Wins $10,000 Bowie 'Cap

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Racetrack, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15.—In as thrilling a struggle as this century-old track has ever witnessed, three game horses, one on three legs, stuck out their noses at the wire at the end of a gruelling battle in the $10,000 added Bowie Handicap. This completed the action on the track but not up at the top of the grandstand where stewards and the camera crew hold sway.

A series of manipulations that followed on the results board kept the crowd of 11,000 in suspense for more than 10 minutes after the finish. First was the "photo finish," second "dead heat," third "objection" and fourth "disqualification."

The picture rightly showed Count Arthur, veteran son of Reigh Count, the winner after one of the best races of his career. It showed Aneroid and Regal Lily locked in a dead heat for second money. It showed Jolly Tar, coupled with Regal Lily in the betting, fourth, and Esposa fifth.

Aneroid's Career Ends

It was Count Arthur's victory, but the race marked the end of the turf career of Aneroid as well as his disqualification. Making his move after being restrained for a mile, Aneroid swung around the leaders and appeared headed for victory as the horses turned into the stretch. In passing Esposa, Aneroid swerved into her and Jockey Nick Wall's claim of foul was allowed.

Count Arthur, bringing his backers a $17 mutuel, of course, remained the winner. Regal Lily, instead of sharing second money, became sole possessor thereof, and Jolly Tar, the other half of the Jeffords entry, was shifted into third position. Wall's protest succeeded in edging Esposa into fourth cash of $500.

While the stewards were debating the merits of Jockey Wall's foul claim, Jockey Ralph Eccard was far around the track walking back, leading a limping Aneroid. The gallant son of The Porter and pride of John A. Manfuso, of Washington, favored his right front leg and Eccard mercifully was sparing the pain of carrying his weight. It was apparent Aneroid had broken down while in the stretch and had swerved into Esposa only because one leg was not steady. That he went on to the finish line, trying every inch of the way and fighting it out in a manner that fell only inches away from the first money, all will attest.

But regardless of the fact that Aneroid broke down and that Esposa was a tiring and beaten

Two Teams Share Lead At Pinehurst

Scores of 66 Posted First 18 Hole Round Par Takes Licking 100 Pros in Best Ball

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 15.—A brilliant round by the veteran Tommy Armour, of Boca Raton, Fla., whose individual ball of 67 was so low that even such an accomplished partner as Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va., could help him only one stroke, gave the Armour-Cruickshank pair a tie for the lead today in the first 18 holes of the 36-hole mid-South professional golf tournament. They turned in a 33-33—66.

Sharing the day's honors was a brand new comer in Clayton Heafner, of Greensboro, N. C., who played an individual round of 68 and was aided two strokes by his partner, Johnny Bulla of Chicago, in scoring 33-33—66 to tie for the lead at the half-way mark.

Heafner was working in a candy factory in Charlotte, N. C., until three months ago when Orville White took him to Greensboro as his assistant. Bulla said Heafner had been defeating him regularly in practice so he decided to take him as his partner.

Henry Picard, the Hershey (Pa.) star, said Heafner was the best performing player since Sam Snead broke into the big time circuit.

Heafner is 24 years old, was born in Charlotte, learned golf as a cady. He served as assistant professional in South Boston, Va., and at the Charlotte Country Club, but devoted most of his time to the candy factory. He said he was going to make the winter tournament if he had to hitch-hike.

Gilmore Gains Six Yards for Tech

Halfback Sommerville, of Western High, started off in a hurry on this play but the McKinley Tech tacklers saw to it that he did not get anywhere. He was stopped for no gain on this try in the first period yesterday at Western Stadium. Tech won the game, 6-0.

T-Streeters Remain In Interhigh Race

Johnny Gilmore Passes to Paul Dean for Score Strong Tech Line Defies Western's Threats Tech May Tie for Title, if Central Loses

A short, flat pass which Paul Dean, of Tech, took out of the air on the 30-yard line and carried over the goal gave his teammates at 6-0 victory over Western High yesterday before about 1,000 spectators at Western Stadium. The triumph earned McKinley a virtual cinch on the runner-up position, as well as a playoff with Central if the latter loses its one remaining game.

Dean's spectacular dash occurred late in the second quarter as he took an aerial from Johnny Gilmore, Crimson halfback. The ball was slightly high, forcing him to stretch his fingers into the atmosphere and at the same time elude Mervin Hilleary, the western safety man. The ball safely under his arm, eDan tore from iHlleary's clutches and continued unhindered to the goal. Jimmy Miller's attempted placement was blocked by the aRider line.

Both Threaten at Outset

At the start of the game any—or everything—hight have happened as Tech advanced to Western's 20, and the Raiders retaliated by plunging to Tech's 16. Both scoring efforts ended with the defense proving a bit to strong for the offense, and the first period ended scoreless.

After the half-time rest, the result of the game still was doubtful. With the air of first downs by Freddy Stone and George Barnes, Western found itself midway of the third period on Tech's 25-yard stripe, a goal seemingly a foregone conclusion. A penalty for holding, however, set Western back snd it was soon forced to kick. The game at this point became so heated that penalties for holding and roughness were frequent. Western suffered another 15-yard holding penalty just before the third period ended, dropping it back to its own 8. On the next play, the last of the period, Barnes fumbled and Tech's Buddy Fletcher fell on the ball on the Western 5.

This time Tech seemed in possession of a larger lead. Dean and Fred Bach advanced the ball to Western's 1-yard stripe on the first two plays of the final period, but Dean was topped on the third. On fourth down, Bach again hit the line but during the play Fletcher, Tech's first string tackle, was caught slugging, for which the team was penalized half the distance to its own goal, a matter of 54 yards. Fletcher was sent to the bench in addition to the yardage penalty.

Late Pass Attack Falls

Western came back into possession of the ball halfway through the final quarter and prepared to hit the airways with a vengeance. Hilleary ran back Gilmore's kick from his own 25 to midfield, and Substitute Back Wrenn undertook a long succession of passes. On the last seven plays of the game Wrenn passed to O'Hanlon, Snow and Sommerville, completing three of his attempts. One first down brought the Westerners to Tech's 27, but there Wrenn lost his touch and Buddy Pope, of Tech, intercepted his last pass to end the gmae.

The fact that Tecir's Johnny Gilmore was on the hurling end of the victory touchdown only emphasizes the excellence of his play throughout the game. His passes, kicks and consistent gains during the contest made him easily the outstanding player on the field. Mervin Hilleary, of the Raiders, carried the burden of ground-gaining for his team. Fletcher, of Tech, played a powerful defensive game until his expulsion, as did Thomas and Fields of the opposition.

Fox, Gainer Sign to Box Next Month

Meet at Garden Is Elimination Bout 15-Round Distance Victor Vs. Bettina

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 15.—Tiger Jack Fox, of Spokane, Wash., and Al Gainer, of New Haven, Conn., Negro veterans, signed today for a 15-round light-heivyweight contenders' bout at the Bronx Coliseum on November 29.

The contracts, signed before the boxing commission, stipulated that the winner will meet Melio Bettina, a southpaw of Beacon, N. Y., for John Henry Lewis' vacated title some time in January. The Bettina bout may be held at Madison Square Garden or the Hippodrome.

This will be the second encounter between Fox and Gainer. They fought 15 rounds at Pittsburgh last year, and Gainer won a questionable decision.

The Bettina bout will be recognized as a title affair only in New York State which vacated John Henry Lewis' title because of his refusal to defend the crown against Fox. Lewis is still recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association. However, John Henry may give up the title before he battles Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis at the Garden on January 27.

Promoter Mike Jacobs and two managers appeared at the commission meeting and posted forfeits of $2,000 each for Friday night's middleweight title tilt at the garden between Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, and Young Corbett, 3d, of Fresno, Calif. This bout also will be recognized as a championship brawl only in New York. The N. B. A. recognizes Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn, as champion.

The commission wishes Krieger to defend his title claims against the Apostoli-Corbett winner in January. It has given Krieger and Manager Hymie Caplin until November 22 to accept. Accordingly Promoter Jacobs and the managers of Apostoli and Corbett agreed today that $2,000 will be taken from the purse of Friday night's winner and posted with the commission as a guarantee that the winner will defend against Krieger, if Krieger wishes to accept the bout. Manager Caplin insists that Krieger will not accept. Krieger wishes to wait six months before defending his recently won crown.

Henry Armstrong, of Los Angeles, and Ceferino Garcia, of the Philippines, who battle for Armstrong's welterweight title at the garden on November 25, were examined today by commission physicians and pronounced in excellent condition.

Iowa Coaching Shake-up Due

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 15 (AP).—Although he declined to issue a formal statement, E. G. (Dad) Schroeder, director of University of Iowa athletics, today inferred a new coaching staff would be named here as soon after the close of the season as possible.

"The board in control of athletics has many things to consider," Schroeder said, "and after weighing all of the problems in the current situation, something will have to be done."

Just what the "something" would be, Schroeder refused to say, but indicated the answer was a new coaching staff.

Reports circulated that the board already had selected a successor to Irl Tubbs, who came here two years ago from Miami (Fla.) University. They were denied, however, by university officials.

Fordham Brushes Up On All Formations

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Fordham's football squad had a thorough rehearsal of its plays today in preparation for Saturday's game with South Carolina.

First the linesmen were given an individual blocking drill. Then the varsity backs worked out against the blocking machines and dummies. Finally there was a long signal drill, in which the freshman line faced the varsity while the dummy backfield took the bumps of downfield blocking. The Rams tried every play, on their list in this session.

Ducky Pond Is 'Shocked'

Gets Harvard Reports Miseries Mount Mainstays Injured

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15.—Ducky Pond's miseries and woes, plenty bad enough, reached the "shocked" stage today. Yale's football boss, hoping to salvage something out of the Elis' worst football season since 1915, by upsetting Harvard here Saturday, learned from a scout that the Crimson "might win by 40, 50 or 60 points."

The Yale mentor, working desperately to pep up the squad's spirti, downcast by a series of discouraging breaks including an unexpected setback last week by Princeton, had hoped to get some encouragement from Levering, who has been scouting Harvard all season.

Levering, a former Yale backfield ace, told Pond and his assistants, that personally, he thought the traditional game between the "big three" arch rivals would be hard fought, but that the Elis' problem was to "stop Harvard's offense which is 25 per cent better than in 1937 and to capitalize on the Crimson's defense which is 50 per cent weaker."

"If the Harvard defense clicks the way it can, Harvard might win by 40, 50 or 60 points," Levering said.

Even before Levering reported, Pond's worries were working overtime. Another defeat for Yale, which so far has lost to Columbia, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Dartmouth and Princeton, would give the 1938 team just about the worst ranking in Elis' football history. The Blue has triumphed over Navy and Boston.

Yale may also be forced to face Harvard without the services of Buck Dyess and Bill Moody, its two best ends, weakening the Blue's aerial attack, its main offensive weapon.

Soccer Loop Results

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 15.—Thompson's penalty goal 20 minutes after the start of the second half gave the Celanese Soccer Club a 1-0 victory over Barton Celanese Local and also placed the Silkmen out in front in the race for the western Maryland title.

Coach Bergman's Father, 81, Dies At Indiana Home

The local sporting world today mourns the death of Joseph Martin Bergman, father of A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, Catholic University athletic director and football coach. Bergman's father succumbed late Monday night at his home in Peru, Ind. Mr. Bergman, who was 81, had been ill for more than a year and his death had been expected for some time.

With the elder Bergman at his death, which came at 11:30, a few hours after "Dutch" arrived by plane from Washington, were Henrietta, his younger daughter, and Alfred, his eldest son. He is survived by two other children, Joseph, second oldest son, and Mrs. Lloyd Smith, of Indianapolis, his oldest daughter.

The deceased was well known in and around Perus as a humanitrian and as director of the local Miami County Museum, famed for its Indian relics and antiques.

quired considerable wealth gh

In his youth, Mr. Bergman acquired considerable wealth through his enterprises in several industries, including the Peru cannery and brewery, of which he was part owner. In his declining years he devoted most of this time to his work at the museum and donated considerable money to charity.

Mr. Bergman, although not an exceptional athlete, contributed three sons who made football history at Notre Dame, where they received affectionate nicknames that have stuck with them since. Alfred was the first of the Bergman boys to carve the family name in the annals of Notre Dame grid heroes. He was called "Big Dutch."

Joe followed his brother to Notre Dame and after a successful football career which caused him to be called "Young Dutch," retired in favor of "Dutch," who proved the best athlete of the three. "Dutch" earned eight letters in two years, a thing unheard of for 12 years, and in his senior football season earned all-Western recognition and was named to several all-American elevens as a right halfback. Although he weighed but 150 pounds, "Dutch" also was a star trackman and baseball player.

H. Thomas Is Barred

Penn. Body Bans Him Kayoed by Galento Fighter Unsatisfactory

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—The State Athletic Commission today banned Harry Thomas, Eagle Bend, Minn., boxer, from fighting in Pennsylvania.

Tony Galento, Orange, N. J., heavyweight, scored a technical knockout over Thomas in the third round last night.

Jules E. Aronson, a member of the commission, asked the commission to concur in withdrawing Thomas' license "because in my opinion Pennsylvania would be much better off with the elimination of boxers of his caliber. . . ."

Commissioner Eddie McCloskey, of Johnstown, concurred with Aronson, to make it a majority action of the three commissioners.

Maybe It's Publicity But It Sounds Good

Gorizia, Italy, Nov. 15 (U.P.)—Keep in mind that Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion of the world, has decided to go into the movies and that this may have sprung from the mind of a press agent.

Anyway, Primo's in love. The lady's name is Giuseppina Cavazzo, of Santa Lucia, and she is a postal clerk. The news of his romance got out when he passed through here, shouting:

"I have to see her. I am madly in love with her. She has simply got to marry me."

Seniors Play for Alma Mater And Pro Scouts, Says Baugh

By Sammy Baugh,
Forward Passing Champion, National Professional Football League.

Dozens of college seniors playing college football throughout the country may believe that they are playing solely for Alma Mater, but actually they are on trial as pro football timber.

SAMMY BAUGH.

Very few big college games are missed by professional league scouts on the hunt for talent. And they are concerned only with the seniors on the college squads. Pro league rules forbid league clubs to sign any college players before their graduation.

These National League scouts are naturally attracted to the players who have gained the headlines, if they are seniors, but as likely as not they will come away from ball games more deeply impressed by under-publicized players.

I know that to be the case on at least one team this season. I talked to two professional league coaches who made it a point to scout players in the Notre Dame-Minnesota game. The chief object of their attentions was Joe Beiner, Notre Dame's tackle and captain, who has been widely advertised as a certain All-American.

They agreed that Beiner was a fine football player, but they came away with the impression that

Now the Sweet Young Things Are Claiming Fame on the Gridiron; What Next, Jeeves?

Alma, Mich., Nov. 15 (AP).—Alma College claimed today to have put the first—and the prettiest—girls' football team into the field and telegraphed a challenge to Sacramento, (Calif.) Junior College for which similar claims had been made.

The telegram sent to the California school by Russell A. Staudacher, Alma publicity director, said:

"We at Alma College dispute your claims and say we have the first and prettiest gals' football team in the United States. The girls are all freshmen and they wish to challenge your squad any time."

St. Louis, Nov. 15 (AP).—The girls at Webster Groves High School aren't challenging anyone—yet, but they've played their first game of real he-man football and they think it's "marvelous."

Outfitted in football pants, jerseys and helmets, not to mention rouge, perfume and anything else that seemed appropriate, the girls played an intra-school game last Saturday, the seniors defeating the juniors, 7 to 0.

Throughout the game, the tackling was vicious enough to be unladylike, the fumbling was atrocious, the blocking accidental and the deception amazing—the seniors scored on the old stolen of liberty play.

On Fishing

Several nice catches of stripers were brought in to Ridge on Saturday evening, but it was only a few of the boats that got off to an early start Sunday morning that did anything at all, for by 9 o'clock a stiff southwester was blowing the water into a smother of suds.

ACKERMAN.

Reprots from bass fishermen show that most streams are in fine shape, but that the fish were refusing to strike at bugs, particularly on streams of high elevation. Willard Ayres with his brother Estel fishing the Great Cacapon River above Yellow Springs found that to hold true with him, but Talbot Denmead and Lee Hoffman, fishing at Millington on the Eastern Shore in low country, found that the bugs still would bring them up. They had five bass, all under 2 pounds, and four pike.

There is little doubt but what Marylanders are getting behind the proposed fish and game commission law that will be presented to the Legislature in January, for at outdoor club and Ike Walton meetings all over the State the members are asking that speakers present the facts in minute detail.

Tonight at the regular monthly meeting of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of Ikes to be held in the clubhouse of the National Capital Field Trial Club out on Bradley boulevard, Maj. Arthur Blackburn, of the Maryland Outdoor Life Federation, has been asked, as guest speaker, to outline the proposed plan of reorganization of the Maryland conservation department.

Many other items of interest are to be taken up, so it is more than likely to be a very full evening, particularly for those members who will find it necessary to explain why they didn't take a turkey home from the shoot on Sunday. An event that, short of last year by a trifle because of the threatening weather, was nevertheless well attended, and a decided success. For enough dollars were made off the Thanksgiving birds to release a great many quail, if it happens to turn out that it will be spent in this way.

However there will in all likelihood be another chance for those that didn't connect Sunday, for Joe Perna tells us another turkey shoot is slated for the very near future.

Anglers in the United States bought 6,901,587 licenses during 1936-37, for which they paid $9,309,949, according to the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. More than 89,000 licenses were sold to women and children, although many States permit them to fish without licenses. In 1932-33 there were only 4,858,058 licensed anglers.

The total number of regular fishing licenses issued to residents and nonresidents in 1936-37 was 4,952,775, while combination hunting and fishing licenses numbered 1,948,812. Of the total issued, 6,234,478 were purchased by residents, and 667,109 by nonresidents. In 30 States, 223,128 short term or tourist licenses were sold.

While the States gained over $2,500,000 in revenue from the sale of anglers' licenses from 1932-33 to 1932-37, on an average they received 5 cents less for every license issued in 1936-37 than in 1932-33, when the average license fee was $1.39 as against $1.34 last year.

Figures obtained form 15 state fish commissions show an estimated $136,485,212 spent by 1,533,-321 licensed anglers in 1936-37. Expenditures for tackle, bait, transportation, guides, boats, gasoline, food, lodging and other equipment in thees states averaged $87.33. Fishing license fees averaged $1.68. Less than 2 per cent of their total average expenditure of $89.01 found its way into the state fish and game departments for the enforcement of the fish laws, educational work, administration, the raising of fish and restrocking programs. In this connection it is interesting to note the ratio of the daily catch per angler compared with the daily limit as reported by eleven states. It was only 40 per cent on a general average.

When less than 2 per cent of teh angler's expenditures is allotted to the fish and game departments for their work, that an angler is able to catch 40 per cent of the daily limit shows the provident use of license money by the states in carefully managed and financed programs.

Bad news is noted for its fast travel, but good news, on occasion gets around, too. H. E. Baggenstoss, president of the Tennessee Wildlife Federation at Nashville, writes Talbot Denmead, president of the Maryland State Fish and Game Protective Association: "Your Maryland black bass bill is straight and to the point. Here's hoping you get it passed. It looks like we will finally stop the sale of black bass at Reelfoot Lake (Tenn.) this year."

Just further proof that the eyes of sportsmen everywhere are focused on the fight for this grand fish in Maryland, one of the four remaining states that do not accord it the protection it deserves.

Rams Ask Waivers On Three Players

Cleveland, Nov. 15 (AP).—The Cleveland Rams professional football team asked waivers today on Tackle Primo Miller and Backs Dick Tuckey and Nelson Peterson. They will be given unconditional releases if rival clubs are not interested in them, Rams President Tom Lipscomb said.

Peterson, who weighs 165 pounds and is the Rams' leading scorer this season, "is just too light for this league," Lipscomb said. Both Peterson and Tuckey were purchased from the Washington Redskins. Miller is a former Rice Institute star.

horse at the time the two came together, the stewards ordered the disqualification. Later, after the numbers had been changed and the payoffs made, it was announced that the stewards had found that Aneroid had broken down at the time of the foul and that his jockey, Ralph Eccard, had been cleared of all responsibility.

Trainer Dion Kerr, of Washington, stood in the middle of the track and shook his head slowly as Aneroid was led back to the barn. Perhaps he remembered the day at Wallnut Hall, Va., when he made a bid of $250 for John Manfuso and took Aneroid from John Hay Whitney. Perhaps he thought of the many brilliant achievements of the onetime castoff. Aneroid limped away, but he held his head high.

The horse who had brought frowns and not bids when he was placed on the block, started 61 times during his career, won 17 races, finished second 9 times and third 7 times. His total earnings were $73,085 while competing for the most part at the very top of the class ladder of the turf.

When he was "right," Aneroid was unbeatable. He paraded through the stakes in New York last year, winning from 6 furlongs to 1¼ miles in a manner that stamped him as a sensation. He holds a win over Seabiscuit earned in a nose finish in the San Antonio Handicap. He ran with the best; he defeated the best, and not even a pain in the leg could keep him out of the picture. It was a game farewell for a game horse.

Within the next month Aneroid will be shipped to Kentucky to start a stud career. Many offers were made Owner Manfuso regarding Aneroid as a stud, but the Blue Grass offered him the best chance, and there he will stand. With his sire, The Porter, almost at the end of his span of usefulness, the turf looks to Aneroid to carry on a strain of game blood.

The final stake of the successful meeting here was a thrilling race from start to finish with Count Arthur, owned by Mrs. John D. Hertz, of Chicago, furnishing a surprise by the fine manner in which he stood the hard test under the riding of Johnny Longden, the country's top jockey. It was only the second time in 12 starts this year that Count Arthur has been able to reach the winner's circle, and the stake brought $9,400 to his owner.

Count Arthur was never far from the top in the field of nine. Longden rated him just behind the pace battle of Two Bob and Esposa. Two Bob, usually rated, was allowed to run during the early stages and for more than a half mile held a small lead over Esposa. Behind Count Arthur, Aneroid, Regal Lily and Jolly Tar were under heavy restraint.

It was not until the field reached the far turn that the leaders began to bunch. Two Bob stopped as if shot and Esposa took a brief lead. However, Count Arthur, given his head by Longden, poked his neck in front of the mare which won the race last year. In the meanwhile, Jockey Eccard, who had saved much ground with Aneroid to this point, swung him to the outside. The son of The Porter gathered momentum and Eccard's black and white striped blouse slid around the leaders.

Into the stretch came the three leaders, straightened out for the run. Esposa was the first to show signs of distress. Aneroid bimpered her and then went on after Count Arthur. Jolly Tar had slid through on the rail and Regal Lily had come to the outside. Count Arthur and Aneroid fought it out, but nearing the wire Regal Lily drove up. It was too close for any but those right on the line to pick the winner.

Notre Dame's other tackle, Paul Kell, was even better. If they were bidding for the services of the two players, they would go higher for Kell than for Beinor.

As I say, the pro scouts aren't concerned much with players other than seniors, except to tab them for future reference. The seniors, however, are on the spot if they have any ideas of entering professional football. What they might have done as sophomores and juniors is immaterial. It is the play in their last season of college that counts with the pro coaches.

I know that there are certain college seniors who are playing football with an eye on the pro league. They know that they are attracting pro scouts, and that the contracts they may be offered depend on how good they proved themselves to be as college seniors.

All professional football salaries are not alike. The college graduate who is intensively sought by the pro league naturally is paid more than the fellow who is taken on merely on the possibility that he will develop. Success in the final year in college can be translated into ready money—lots of it.

The seniors in the smaller colleges are not overlooked, however, and any one who distinguishes himself has almost as fine a chance to cash in on the bidding. Pro scouts cover the smaller schools and the bidding is apt to be very competitive.

All college seniors are subject to the draft list, of course, and if one team is not willing to pay his salary another might be, and such deals are frequently made. However, if the player has proved himself to be promising professional material he rarely has any difficulty arranging satisfactory salary terms.

Professional football this year is enjoying its greatest season, competitively and financially, and club owners are in a position to make the game more attractive than ever to the college seniors to whom they take a fancy.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

Well, we're moving everything, the Marvel ratings, the consensus, the selections and our slim bankroll over to Prince Georges County today for the opening of the last stand on the Maryland big time. They held a "stake-a-day" meeting at Pimlico but it wasn't exactly a "steak-a-day" for the Benningites. However, we had our spots (mostly before our eyes) and a new meeting always brings new hopes. So let's get on the line out among the whistling pines and try to get the winter coal money. Looks as if we'll have to go without a number of riders for the remainder of the season hereabouts. Johnny Longden, leading United States rider with 205 winners, left last night along with Silvio Coucci for California. Little Beverly Hacker leaves today for New Orleans, making good our prediction that he was headed for the big time ovals. We'll surely miss him at Charles Town. When Jockey George Woolf left for California he had in his pocket C. S. Howard's check for $1,500, the rider's reward for winning with Seabiscuit. Jockey Eddie Roberts, who fell and was struck by Good Chance in Monday's steeplechase, was around yesterday morning. He said he felt fine despite a badly skinned face. George Seabo, who won the Pimlico, New England and Maryland Futurities with Challedon, will remain hereabouts and is due for plenty of action at Bowie. Willie Dufford, a boy who won six races in New York before coming here, will ride at Charles Town. More than 300 horses, many due to see action at Bowie, are stabled at Laurel. Bowie officials have arranged to have Bill Shrewbridge at Laurel each morning for the purpose of taking entries and scratches. Trainer J. P. Jones has shipped Conquer, winner of five straight, and other members of his stable over from Pimlico. Will Martin has purchased Abbatore from Frank Ray at private terms. John A. Manfuso, Washington owner of Aneroid, claimed Ocean Roll out of Monday's eighth race. Ocean Roll, after campaigning at Bowie and Charles Town, will be put awy for the winter.

BILL.

First race—My Shadow closed much ground when third to Pause at Laurel. Meets cheaper company and should like track. Part One has raced well at this level and should give a good account of himself. Autumn Echo gets good figure on New England form.

Second race—Wrenace has been displaying fair form in route races recently and is dropping down for this. In good spot. Should win. Moon Harvest is an honest plater that has been running up close and may take it all. Bill Bleiweiss has speed and is dangerous.

Third race—Old Jake was running all over the field when he got up to second place to Baby Talk Looks much the best. Kai-Min won with this kind Monday and may be the one to beat. Izar Zuri won her last, is in good hands, but is moving up.

Fourth race—Black Bun has won his last two heats in New York. Goes well on off tracks, and should like Bowie. Slight edge. Love Day won his first two starts in New England before his third to Buyer Beware at Pimlico. The one to beat. War Moon gets a good figure.

Fifth race—Sun Egret ran a good race in the Ritchie after getting off to a poor start. At his best and will be hard to beat. Accolade was a stake winner at Laurel, although recent efforts have been poor he figures to be close. Honey Cloud is at his best and can take it all.

Sixth race—Grand Duke didn't care for the off going at Pimlico but with that heat under his belt should take this. Ladino was third in the mud in New York; is not outclassed here and likes the track. Scatter Brain is dropping down afte ra poor showing.

Seventh race—Spring Meadow beat The Runner at Pimlico and has performed well this fall. In form and should win right back. San Antioca is the chief contender and can make plenty of trouble if he breaks well. Monument is not outclassed and has good money chance.

Best bet—Grand Duke.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZENANA, $5.00, $3.20, $2.50; GAONA, $25.30, $8.90; BALKAN WAR, $2.70.

ZENANA, off alertly, went up on outside to engage BALKAN WAR leaving backstretch, came around pacemaker to take command, drew clear and held away to end under drive. GAONA, forced to race in close quarters to first turn, came with bold rush on outside in closing test and was going fastest. BALKAN WAR raced CODY into submission and weakened in closing test. LACKAWANNA, off poorly, made up much ground to close full of run. CODY was rushed up on inside to press pace and tired in stretch. WILD IRISH closed mainly from slow beginning. HARDIHOOD had speed to stretch and faltered. MAROC was through after a quarter.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates for all but Blue Tints. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 1:50. Off 1:52⅕. Winner, E. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BASS WOOD, $5.10, $3.30, $2.60; FOXSHADE, $5.00, $3.50; PREDESTINED, $3.60.

BASS WOOD, allowed to settle into stride, moved up on outside to take command without effort and won with speed in reserve. FOXSHADE, well placed from start, moved up menacingly in midstretch, but weakened. PREDESTINED was hard ridden and is not counted a serious factor. MANYMOR closed with good energy. EQUESTRIAN set early pace and stopped. BLUE TINTS went in air at break and was virtually left. LADY TIMAROLE quit after forcing pace.

Daily Double, Zenana and Bass Wood, Paid $14.60.

THIRD RACE—Two and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Patapsco Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:14½. Off 2:15. Winner, R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRATTLER, $3.00, $2.30, $2.30; PROMOTER, $2.50, $2.70; CLAQUE, $21.20.

PRATTLER, excellently handled, went to front at once and held away throughout to win easily. PROMOTER was reserved for turn of field, moved up with good energy approaching final fence, but was held safe. CLAQUE went evenly. BELL MAN quit. EDGEMONT lugged in repeatedly and was poorly handled. BRIAR BLUE was through early.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Dulaney Valley. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:46. Off 2:49½. Winner, C. S. Howard's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAYAK II, $4.00, $2.90, $2.70; RISSA, $4.30, $3.60; ROAR, $7.00.

KAYAK II, forward factor from start, was rated close to ROAR'S pace to stretch, took command when placed to drive and was under pressure at end. RISSA lacked early speed and closed with good energy. ROAR set good pace and held on courageously after being displaced. SIR RALEIGH closed full of run. SLOW MOTION saved ground throughout. REHEARSAL had early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,300. The Stewart Handicap. Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:15. Off 3:17½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENRIE, $8.50, $5.60, $3.50; FINANCE, $6.10, $4.50; ROBERT L., $3.80.

PENRIE, tiptoed into command going to first turn, shook off repeated challenges of FINANCE and barely lasted under strong handling. FINANCE raced on outside of PENRIE throughout, rallied gamely in stretch, but was in very close quarters in final eighth and Kurtsinger was unable to do him justice. ROBERT L. raced in pocket on inside along backstretch, was swung out for racing room and fought it out gamely. YOUR BUDDY, slow to get under way and carried wide at first turn, closed with bold rush. INFIDOX had speed in spots. TRANSMITTER showed good effort. PROPH quit badly.

SIXTH RACE—One and five-eighth miles. Purse, $10,000 added. The Bowie Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:46½. Off 3:49½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNT ARTHUR, $17.00, $7.80; $5.40; REGAL LILY (entry), $6.10, $7.30; JOLLY TAR (entry), $7.30.

COUNT ARTHUR, in thick of contention from start, displaced TWO BOB to take short lead approaching stretch and hung on with rare courage under strong handling. ANEROID, under heavy restraint and saving ground for three-quarters, was taken out for racing room, improved position steadily on outside, swerved into ESPOSA in midstretch and closed gamely. REGAL LILY, rated when outrun in early stages, closed with rush on outside. JOLLY TAR, slow to begin, saved ground entering stretch and closed resolutely along rail. ESPOSA was closest to pace of TWO BOB for half, raced with COUNT ARTHUR to stretch and was a beaten horse when impeded. MR. CANRON went well for a half and stopped. TWO BOB quit badly after setting early pace.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:20. Off 4:32. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAYRO, $13.90, $6.00, $4.10; MELODY MAID, $3.90, $3.20; CELTIC LEGEND, $4.90.

MAYRO, steadied along closest to pace of CELTIC LEGEND, rallied when placed to drive approaching stretch and drew clear to be kept to pressure to end. MELODY MAID was poorly handled, raced inside and outside and closed full of run. CELTIC LEGEND was hustled to front going to first turn, drew out and weakened right at end after saving much ground. SCHLEY NURSE hung in final turn after good effort. PUDDLES went to outside for racing room and was held safe. SCARLET O was used up running forwardly under hustling tactics and stopped. DONA DULCIN was rushed in early stages and tired. FLYING ZELMA had speed for a half. MAHLETTE failed to show speed at any stage.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:55. Off 5:00½. Winner, P. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LATER ON, $8.60, $4.20, $2.80; WESTBROOKE, $9.50, $5.60; HOWARD, $4.80.

LATER ON, not hurried in early stages, responded willingly when placed to drive to improve position sharply, took lead inside eighth pole, but had to be kept to extreme pressure to stave off WESTBROOKE. The latter followed closest to GOOD FLAVOR'S pace while under stout restraint, took command after a half, saved ground and came again after being headed. HOWARD closed gamely. DEPARTED could not threaten seriously. GOOD FLAVOR stopped. STAR MIXER was outrun. ANHELATION started outside the gates, dwelt at break and was far back throughout, but closed a gap at end.

N. B. A. Refunds Tony Galento's $10,000, But His Challenge Stands

Charter Forbids Holding Forfeit

Approves Challenger's Bid for Bout Foster Makes Ruling on Matter Next Move Up to Galento's Manager

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With a regretful wag of his head, Edward C. Foster, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, yesterday handed back Tony Galento's $10,000 and politely informed him that it couldn't handle the financial end of his challenge to Joe Louis under the terms of its corporate charter.

Galento last week posted $10,000 in cash with Heine Miller, first vice president of the N. B. A. and secretary of the District ring commission, of which $5,000 was as evidence of good faith in challenging the champion and $5,000 was to ride as a side bet that he whipped him. The challenging papers were signed and the money forwarded to Providence, R. I., N. B. A. headquarters, before Foster suddenly discovered the charter prohibited such goings on.

Foster arrived here Monday evening and went into a huddle with Heine Miller on the matter yesterday morning. Later he issued a statement clarifying his organization's position, and explaining exactly why Miller should not have accepted the cash in the first place.

Telephone Conversation

Miller said he had discussed the matter with Foster in a telephonic conversation, and had received his verbal approval to accept the money and challenge.

Foster pointed out in his statement that the National Boxing Association is empowered to handle or accept any moneys other than its own. The association, he continued, was in sympathy with Galento's efforts to get a title match with the heavyweight champion inasmuch as Tony is the N. B. A.s' top-ranking heavyweight.

Foster's statement, which was in the form of a letter to Charles E. Ford, attorney for the Galento interests, was as follows:

Dear Mr. Ford:

Appreciating the spirit and intentions behind the Galento $10,000 challenge, I somewhat reluctantly return herewith our copy of the agreement with cashier's check for $10,000.

When Col. Miller first phoned me regarding Galento's offer I told him over the telephone that I believed this would be agreeable. However, whn the details of th agreement with the attached check came to me it was brought to my attention that under our Rhode Island charter we cannot accept monies of this kind.

The National Boxing Association is fully in accord with contestant Galento's challenge and believes him to be the most logical contender for a title match with Champion Joe Louis.

Neither has the National Boxing Association any criticism to make of Galento's $10,000 challenge or $5,000 side bet offer.

The National Boxing Association simply is required to make the point that the N. B. A. is not authorized to function as a stakeholder.

All that is necessary, it appears to me, is for Galento to designate another stakeholder.

Very truly yours,

Edward C. Foster.

Mr. Foster, it will be noted, refers to a $10,000 challenge and $5,000 side bet. A total of $10,000 was posted, half of it as a forfeit guaranteeing Galento's appearance for a bout and the other half to ride as a side bet that Tony won the match.

Foster's decision puts the next move squarely up to Galento, unless, of course, Tony's management is satisfied with the publicity gleaned from the stunt of publicly flashing a 10-grand note. It looks like the boys cut themselves a handsome piece of publicity, what with pictures and stories of the challenging maneuvers going to every outpost of the Nation.

Galento claims he can't post any money of the proportions deposited here in New York, or elsewhere, according to Miller. Commissions simply will not entertain a challenge from old Two Ton, according to Miller, which was one of the factors which led him to accept the challenge.

Tony's slightly sloppy victory over Harry Thomas at Philadelphia Monday night may retard his efforts to obtain a championship bout, but as bad as it was will not hurt the ballyhoo.

Pitt Frosh Athletes Get Tuition Bills

Are Told to Pay $150 Scholarships Banned Will Be Given Jobs May Earn Money

Pittsburgh, Nov. 15.—University of Pittsburgh freshman who thought they had entered school on athletic scholarships were presented with $150 bills for half-term tuition today and told to pay them.

The freshmen, some of whom are Coach Jock Sutherland's most promising football material in years, were promised additional job opportunities so they can pay for the tuition but then protested they already have trouble keeping up with jobs, class work and football practice.

It was the thirdand most important demonstration that Pitt authorities meant business after Chancellor Dr. John G. Bowan said, late in 1937 while the Panthers were winning he mythical national championship, that sports would be "de-emphasiged."

The first manifestation came when the Panthers announced they would refuse any invitation to the 1938 Rose Bowl game. That was attributed to the school's refusal to give "spending money" to the various squad members, and, too, a blase outlook by veteran members of the Panther team.

Refused to Practice

The second came this fall when 18 sophomore squad members refused to practice only a few days before the first game in order to settle "differences" with the Pitt business department on how long and hard they should work on jobs around the building, and whether they should be given an advance on future earnings at their school jobs.

The first of this week the 33 members of the freshman football-basket ball squad were handed bills for the first half of their tuition charges and were told flatly the money was "payable currently."

When the freshmen claimed they entered school with the understanding they would receive athletic scholarships, Business Manager John Weber pointed to the program of sports de-emphasization—which bans athletic scholarships of any kind.

Then Werber called attention to promissory notes for $300 full tuition fee—which the freshman athletes had made out to the school. The frosh said they understood the notes were only a formality, and that the athletic department would "take care" of them.

Promised Longer Jobs

The situation resulted in Weber promising the boys longer jobs so they could work out the tuition. They now do 14 hours work a week around the university and get $48 a month to care for board, room and clothing. The only trouble they claim, is that they have as much work now as they can handle: Classroom schedules, football practice and night work at the various jobs that are obtained for college students.

The freshmen hope to settle their problem by arbitration. They planned no walk-out and continued practice for their last game of the season against Kiski Prep School. There is a possibility that unless a solution is found, perhaps by drawing some of the deemphasizing teeth, an alternative may be withdrawal of some of the frosh from Pitt; and the squad contains some of the most promising material the school ever has had.

Layden, 'Coach of the Week,' Wanted to Quit as Freshman

Persuaded to Stay by Rockne Now in Old Masters Positions Is Almost Carbon of Knute

New York, Nov. 15.—Notre Dame's thin man, Elmer Layden, today was picked by the United Press as "the coach of the week" because the fighting Irish continued their unbroken string of triumphs with a 19-0 victory over Minnesota, the most decisive defeat inflicted on the Gophers since Bernie Bierman brought them back to a ranking Midwest power in 1933.

With seven straight victories this season and three at the tail end of last season, Notre Dame now has a winning streak of 10 in a row and a chance at the first unbeaten, untied season since Knute Rockne's 1930 masterpiece. Two games remain on Notre Dame's schedule—Northwestern Saturday and Southern California December 3.

Famed as a member of Notre Dame's immortal four horseman backfield, Layden was hailed by Rockne as packing more concentrated driving power than any 160-pound fullback who ever lived. Lean and wiry, Layden was listed on the weight chart and on programs as weighing 175. He never scaled more than 160 but opponents never doubted his program weight. Rather they sometimes marveled how a 175-pounder could rip through a line with such smashing force.

Rockne Saved Layden

It was Rockne himself who saved Layden for football and started him on a career which, strangely enough, eventually planted the slender Davenport, Iowa, boy in the shoes of the master. In 1921, as a freshman at Notre Dame, Layden became homesick and was going back to Davenport. Rockne stopped him by saying, "Elmer, we haven't lost a freshman yet. I hope you won't be the first one."

Layden, who is 35, became head coach and athletic director at Notre Dame in 1933. His teams have won 32, lost eight and tied three. Previous to this season Layden's best Notre Dame team was in 1935 when the fighting Irish won seven, lost one and tied one.

Layden's coaching methods are most a carbon copy of Rockne's. He thinks winning teams are based on sound fundamentals, speed, reserve power and precision. Like Rockne, Layden likes to have a team of shock troops which he can alternate as a unit with the first team.

Earlier in his coaching career Layden was inclined to take things too seriously but his attitude now is more relaxed and confident. His football philosophy now is: "Let the other fellow worry about what you're going to do."

He does not believe in pep talks or make any attempt to key up his players, operating on the theory that if the team is keyed high for one certain game it's bound to suffer a letdown for another.

Leyden's hobbies are hunting, fishing and golfing. He went fishing the day before the first practice this fall despite the fact that 21 of last year's 33 lettermen were missing. Last Monday, after the Minnesota victory, he went hunting. He is a devoted family man, and has three children, Joanne, 11; Elmer, jr., 8, and Michatel, 1½. He hopes his boys grow up to be Notre Dame football stars.

Layden is famed for his diplomacy and his sharp analytical mind, which probably was sharpened by his law studies. He was admitted to the bar in 1926. He has a deep, slightly nasal voice, and in speech is reminiscent of Rockne.

Records Show Cooke Among Best Passers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 15.—A belated boom of recognition for Lem Cooke, the Herrando (Miss.) Hurricane, was launched here this afternoon when a class in calculus accidentally stumbled on the discovery that Lemuel is one of the Nation's outstanding pigskin pitchers.

Publication of the figures sent the entire athletic department thumbing through the files, last year's records and musty old dust-covered documents to learn just how Cooke's record stands up with current and past performances. Cooke, it seems, is ne plus ultra of the passing brigade this season.

Briefly, Cooke has completed 51 passes in an even 100 attempts—a mark approached by no other player this season, professional or collegiate, for gains totaling 702 yards. His average is better than 14 yards a pass. Four of the heaves were to Capt. Pete Powell for touchdowns, and three more planted the ball so close to the end stripe touchdowns were made on the next play or two.

Cooke, not a extraordinarily big fellow, has absorbed terrific punishment this season getting the ball away, but has displayed an excellent form and accuracy. He can throw the ball high, wide and handsome, as well as easil yas he tosses those bullet-like short pegs just over the line. Lou Burke, Clarence Corbett and George Ghesquiere, all ends, and Whitehead, a back, have been on the receiving end of the passes.

Cooke is winding up his third year of varsity football. He is captain-elect of the varsity nine, playing third base in baseball.

Secret practice was inaugurated today as the varsity opposed the plebes in a light scrimmage, with the fourth classmen using Army formations. A picked group of varsity men will try the West Point plays against the first stringers tomorrow, and from then on practice will be at top speed.

Cliff Lenz and Al Feldmeier are on the crippled list, but Frank Blaha, a blocking back and pass receiver, reported back after being out two weeks.

Episcopal Nears Title

Meets Woodberry Clash Saturday Play at Orange, Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Nov. 15.—Episcopal High School's varsity eleven shares the spotlight in a renewal of Virginia's oldest prep school grid rivalry Saturday, when the Maroons invade Orange, Va., for their annual traditional engagement with Woodberry Forest.

As the result of three consecutive victories, the Maroons now hold a one-game edge in the series, with 18 victories. Two contests have ended in scoreless ties.

Although annually regarded as Episcopal's most important game, the Woodberry tilt this year has more than the usual significance in view of the fact that the State non-military prep school title hinges on its outcome. A victory for the Maroons will give them undisputed possession of the championship they held last year and shared with St. Christopher's School, of Richmond, in 1937, while a tie or defeat would automatically shift the title to St. Christopher's. Woodberry, with one defeat at the hands of the Richmonders, is out of the running.

Episcopal will carry into the fray one of the most impressive records ever compiled by an Old Dominion elevn, for in the last three seasons they have lost but one game, and they haven't bowed to a Virginia rival since midway of the 1935 season. The Hill School, of Pottstown, Pa., administered the lone defat, routing the Alexandrians, 26-13, earlier this season. Against that one loss, the Maroons have recorded five victories and one tie, the latter a scoreless affair, with McDonogh School, of Baltimore.

In previous games against State prep opponents, the locals crushed Randolph-Macon Academy, 25-0, and defeated Virginia Episcopal School, of Lynchburg, 6-0.

Woodberry Forest has won six out of eight games, losing only to St. Christopher's and Petersburg High, class A champions of the State. Despite the two losses, the Orangemen boast a formidable record, having scored a total of 179 points to their opponents' 41.

Coach of Red Wings Shakes Up Squad

New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Manager Jack Adams, of the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, dissatisfied with his club's showing, today brought up Pete Kelly and Sid Abel from Pittsburgh of the International American League for tonight's game with the New York Rangers. Adams previously had threatened to send all of the Red Wings to the minors and bring up the Pittsburgh club intact if his boys didn't improve.

Kelly and Abel are forwards, the former a veteran and the latter a 20-year-old recruit playing his first season of professional hockey.

Gaithersburg High Soccermen End Unbeaten Season

Gaithersburg, Md., Nov. 15.—By defeating Poolesville, 8-0, last Friday, the Gaithersburg High soccer team completed its third undefeated season in five years.

This year, unlike its two previous undefeated years—1934 and 1935—the team was deadlocked on two occasions to mar its record of straight victories. The alumni team earned one tie and Richard Montgomery High School the other. Gaithersburg, however, has compiled an enviable record of 33 wins in the last six years, as compared with only six losses and two ties.

This year's unbeaten club was a far cry from the power teams which went through '34 and '35 undefeated. The players were light and fast, every man on the forward line being an excellent shot. Coach Bertschey, Gaithersburg coach, feels that next year's aggregation may be as good or beter than this years. Only three men will be lost by graduation: Fullback Mainhart, Capt. Gartner, forward, and Lyddanne, goal.

N. C. State in Secret Practice for Duke

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 15 (AP).—N. C. State held another secret practice today as Coach Doc Newton brushed up his offense and worked on a defense designed to stop Eric Tipton and Bob O'Mara, Duke backs.

State meets the Blue Devils in Durham Saturday.

Although State has won only a few games this season, it has been strong on defense. Only North Carolina's Tarheels were able to score more than two touchdowns against the Wolfpack. Alabama got two, and all other opponents got either one or none.

Are you Cheerful in the Morning?

. . . are you the Man who Cares?

A MAN'S MANNERS at the breakfast table are usually a pretty good sign of his character. If he's considerate of others in the morning, he's generally a decent chap to have around at any time.

The man who salutes his grapefruit with a smile is seldom the man who overate or overdrank the night before. Cheerfulness depends a lot on moderation; it seldom follows over-indulgence.

We'd like to confine Carstairs to "men who care". . . to the kind of men who value fine quality too highly to abuse it.

Boom Year Expected by Golf Pros

Money Players Gather
Jacobus Re-elected
Tourney Bids Made
Cotton May Visit

Chicago, Nov. 15.—The money players of golf—the professionals—looked back on a good season and ahead to a boom one today.

Reports made at the opening of the twenty-second annual meeting of the Professional Golfers Association indicate that the 1939 season will be one of the best ever enjoyed by the pros, both from a standpoint of interest in golf and the amount of prize money to be distributed.

When the current campaign winds up December 31, professionals will have competed for $182,500 in purses during the 1938 season, an increase of $19,150 over 1937, according to the report of Jack Mackie, P. G. A. secretary. In 1939 the pot of gold will aggregate $200,000 in 40 tournaments, four more than the number in which some 800 P. G. A. members competed this year.

Fred Corcoran, whose retention as tournament bureau manager for another year was announced, said more than 500,000 persons attended the 36 P. G. A. sponsored tournaments this season. During the year the P. G. A. membership showed a slight increase, with 1,739 pros now on the list, Secretary Tom Walsh said.

One definite action was taken by the delegates, representing the 28 sections in the national body. They voted to make the P. G. A. senior championship, held as an experiment last year, an annual event. It will be played December 5-7 at Augusta, Ga., where Jock Hutchinson won it in 1937. Association members 50 years or older, may compete.

It was learned the association has received several bids for the 1939 national championship and the Ryder Cup matches, but definite action is not expected until the executive board's meeting next month. The British P. G. A., it was known, has asked that the Ryder Cup matches be held either late in October or early in November, indicating that America's leading pros and those from Great Britain may battle it out on a Southern course.

While the subject did not reach the floor today, it was learned the P. G. A. is greatly interested in the possible visit to this country of Henry Cotton, British star, for a match with some United States expert, possbily Sam Snead. The P. G. A., it was understood, may arrange a series of matches for Cotton.

Movinf the business of selecting officers a day ahead of original schedule, the association re-elected George Jacobus, of Ridgewood, N. J., president for a seventh consecutive term. Tom Walsh, of Chicago, was re-elected national secretary, and Jack Mackie, of Far Rockaway, Long Island, N. Y., was re-elected national treasurer.

Hope of JimMeade Facing Hoyas Fades

Maryland Back Still Out With Injury
Georgetown Drilling Hard for Terps
Colonials, Cards Preparing for Games

By Jack Munhall.

Buried in an innocous press release from Maryland yesterday was a bit of news vastly more important than many would believe. It was contained in a paragraph that said Jim Meade positively would not play against Georgetown on Saturday.

Meade, if you recall, was an All-American halfback choice last season and had been expected to lead the Terps to another great record. But in the Penn State game Meade was lugged from the field in the second quarter suffering a fractured ankle that, it was thought, would prevent him from donning a uniform again this season.

But there were many who didn't believe the fine-looking 195-pound senior was through. Meade will be back, they'd tell you, just as good as ever. With each succeeding game, when Meade did not play and didn't even don a uniform the doubters contented themselves with the thought that he was being saved as a surprise package for Georgetown which, in the meantime, would have been lulled into a false sense of security.

However, the announcement that Meade's ankle is not yet completely healed, together with a statement by Coach Frank Dobson that he wouldn't allow it even if Meade requested a chance to face Georgetown, makes it definite the crack back has finished his football career.

Terps Rely on Weidinger

In meade's absence Maryland is looking to another fine back who in the past has been especially troublesome to Georgetown. Quarterback Charley Weidinger is the main hope of Maryland for an upset in the fifth renewal of the modern rivalry with Jack Hagerty's unspanked Hilltoppers.

Weidinger, whose great passing plus Meade's unstoppable line smashing gave Maryland a 12-2 victory over Georgetown last season, has been handicapped by injuries, but now is in great shape and firing the ball with old-time accuracy. Against Florida last week, Weidinger gave one of the best passing exhibitions of his career. Twenty-four passes he tried against the 'Gators. Thirteen he completed for an average of bette rthan .500 and a yardage gain of more than 150.

And Georgetown is full aware of the fact that Mr. Weidinger is a threat each and every time he draws back his right arm and casts an eye for a receiver. Yesterday Coach Hagerty, after another of his lectures to the boys who are being repeatedly told that Maryland will not roll over and play dead Saturday to allow the Hoyas to complete their first undefeated season, drilled his squad on pass defense.

The Georgetown line, which has yet to yield a touchdown, can hardly be improved, but pass defense is something else. Not that Georgetown has been an easy mark for an aerial attack. Rather it hasn't been called upon to face a marksman of Weidinger's ability, and therefore its vulnerability to a pass barrage is relatively untested.

Colonials Drill

It was rumored that Mr. Marshall was seeking lads of boxing ability to prevent a recurrence of the hiding the 'Skins took from the Bears. More logically speaking, Marshall probably was on hand to have another look at Bob Nowaskey and John Rebholz, who are slated to receive trials with the world champions.

The Colonials had only a light workout for the second straight day as the boys were given more time to recover from injuries ini the Kansas game. Sunny Jones, shifted recently from tackle to center, and several other players are badly bruised and not fit to scrimmage. So it is expected G. W. will not scrimmage at all this week.

Yards Face Loyola

When Catholic University takes the field against Loyola in New Orleans Sunday it might be surprised to discover that the game of its foe bears a striking similarity to its own.

But that is not surprising to those acquainted with the Wolves of Coach Larry (Moon) Mullins. Mullins, it seems, is a product of Notre Dame and, like C. U. Coach "Dutch" Bergman, was grounded in the fundamentals of the system made famous by the late Knute Rockne. Mullins, one of the best of a long line of great Irish fullbacks, teaches the Notre Dame style of play, as has Berbman, and enjoyed considerable success therewith.

Though Loyola has only split even in eight starts this season, the Cards probably will be on the short end of the betting. For the four teams that lowered Loyola's colors were unbeaten, untied Texas Tech, Louisiana State and Creighton and Southwestern University, a pair of very tough little football schools.

Most feared of the Loyola players is Fullback Joe Franchia, a triple-threater, whose specialty is kicking. One of his kicks this season carried 70 yards on the fly.

Boxing Feud Is on Again

Amateurs Inaugurate Tourney Next Week

Feudists who previously have opposed in professional warfare will invade the District Golden Gloves boxing tournament at Joe Turner's arena a week from tonight when Matt Twomey and Sydney Fishel, rival managers in the professional game, again match strategy.

Providing the big thrill of the past summer season when Matt Twomey's Steve Mamakos avenged an earlier defeat by upsetting Fishel's George Abrams, these old rivals again are to come together when Twomey directs into action his D. C. National Guardsmen against the National Capital Sporting Club representation sponsored by Fishel.

Indications are that the Fishel-Twomey amateur rivalry will be every bit as momentous as was the professional warfare, both men having enrolled ten entries and each being determined to outdo the other.

Twomey, whose teams previously have won three titles outright and tied for another in Golden Gloves competition, is sending ten seniors into action, while Fishel is sponsoring six novices and four seniors.

Included among Fishel's entries are Buster Miller, 126-pound sensation, and Jim Brady, who has shifted to the 175-pound division. Brady is the defending heavyweight champion, but has shifted to the lighter weight for this year's competition.

Tickets for Golden Gloves warfare go on sale at Joe Turner's downtown office Friday morning at 9 o'clock and are popularly priced.

Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics; Geary Eppley, director of athletics at Maryland, and graduates of all departments of the university will be on hand to celebrate one of the most successful seasons ever enjoyed by a Georgetown football team.

Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel for the District of Columbia, will preside.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

And Contents Noted

New York, Nov. 15.—Reader reaction is a sometimes strange thing, a though that occurred as I plunged into the mail that has been piling up and came across a couple of letters which have gone unanswered.

Of course there are always complaints in these sphere of sports. If you pick the Yankees to beat the Cubs in the World's Series someone is sure to charge you with prejudice and want to know what you have against the City of Chicago, never seeming to realize that you're just expressing your own personal and not important, but public opinion.

VIDMER.

Of if you mention oJe Louis as the greatest heavyweight in the world, someone is sure to wade in with a long winded argument showing how he never saw the day he could lick Jack Dempsey.

But the followers of football seem to be the touchiest of all. One of the letters referred to above is from William S. Watters, whose complaint concerns what he seems to feel is the shabby treatment Notre Dame receives in this vicinity.

"Frequently before and always after Notre Dame has beaten Army" he complains, "newspaper writers become sympathetically apologetic for the Cadets and point out that it is Notre Dame's manpower and squad reserve strength that is triumphant."

Well generally it is. Certainly it was in this year's game, but that doesn't seem to me any reflection on Notre Dame.

Same Result

Same Result

"There is an absence of comment that the week before Army plays Notre Dame it invites some weaker team to play at West Point and then the week after the Notre Dame game it invites another weak team to engage in a struggle at Michie Stadium."

"What difference does it make, as long as Notre Dame won the game? The Cadets were worn down by the fourth quarter this year anyway.

"It is recognized by this writer, at least, that the entertaining proclivities of the officers in charge of public relations and other fraternal aspects may have some effect in inducing sports writers to minimize or overlook the real defect in the Army squad."

"Ah ha! A spektic! It might interest Mr. Watters to know that whenever I get tickets for the Army-Notre Dame game from West Point I pay for them. But each year Notre Dame sends me a complimentary pair, for which I am indeed grateful, nor do I think that they do it because they think it will influence my point of ciew. Anyway it doesn't.

"To the writer a most annoying football spectacle is to hear cadets cheering in Michie Stadium when one of their players runs roughshod over an undermanned team."

(Of course, the Notre Dame student body maintains a sympathetic silence whenever the South Benders roll up a score. Strange that this objectionable outburst is peculiar to West Point alone.)

"Some keen-minded sports writer could go into a research study to see if any team that ever defeated the Army at West Point was ever invited for a return game."

(Without even a keen mind or the necessity of research I might mention Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Brown, Princeton, Notre Dame—in fact practically every team that ever has defeated the Army at West Point has returned. Name me one that hasn't.)

Comparative Greatness

The other letter that gives me pause is from a young man who, following Cornell's victory last Saturday, booms forth with an objection to Dartmouth being called a great football team. He bolsters his argument by naming several teams which he thinks could beat Dartmouth, including Pittsburgh, Fordham, Duke, Alabama and Tennessee, Texas Christian, St. Mary's, California and Santa Clara, Ohio State, Northwestern, Notre Dame and Minnesota.

He may be right, at least partly right, but that doesn't prove that Dartmouth isn't a great team, too, at least as the word "great" is used among football folks. After all Dartmouth doesn't play any of those teams mentioned, probably because it doesn't consider itself in the same class with them. Which is no knock at Dartmouth.

After all, there might be some question as to the greatness of Pittsburgh, Fordham, Duke and the rest also. That is, judged on their ability to beat any team in the country. I doubt very much, for instance, if they could beat the New York Giants, the Chicago eBars, the Green Bay Packers or the Washington Redskins.

But just as Dartmouth doesn't play Pittsburgh, Fordham and Duke, neither do they play the members of the National Professional League. They aren't in the same class.

For that matter, Amherst has a great football team this year; a great team in its class, but Dartmouth probably wouldn,t have much trouble beating them.

All of which, I hope, will serve to answer a couple of letters which I had let go up to now.

Women Wrestlers On Hagerstown Card

Hagerstown, Nov. 15. — Professional wrestling is to be brought back to Hagerstown this month for a trial after an absence of several years. John Contos, Baltimore promoter, has announced he is bringing Joe Savoldi here against Hank Metheny in the main bout November 23 at the State Armory. On the same card will be Dolly Dalton, Atlanta, Ga., billed as the holder of the women's light heavyweight crown. She will meet Billy DeWitt, of Boston.

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Bamboo Gardens is going to sprout into a garden of gala tomorrow evening. (No, the press agent didn't write that. It's our own idea.) For Al Norton, prize emcee, will take over Bamboo funmaking, also direct his own band. Al's a topsy—in both senses. Here's to his success!

A four-star Paul Florens Revue will also debut at Bamboo tomorrow evening. It will be headed by the Waynes, notable ballroom dancers, and the Mulva Sisters, who lately appeared at the Earle, also other Manhattan acts. A beauty octet of Florens girls will be featured in production numbers. The show will run a full 40 minutes.

Very chi-chi, but definitely carefree, too, is the beautiful Lounge Riviera, 2400 Sixteenth Street, which will open Friday evening. It's intimate but spacious; somehow suggests the sunny outdoors.

Of a sparkle will be the entertainment by the Three Swingsters and "Three Maids on a Mike," radio notables all. It's understood that Evalyn Tyner, well known on the air waves, but in private life the wife of "2400's" Manager Fordyce Minnick, had much to do with the assembling of this fine ensemble.

Earl Lawrence (Shoreham Blue Room) sings like Lawrence Tibbett, is good looking as Nelson Eddy. No exaggeration. He's Rudy Vallee's newest find. Wally Brown, emcee-comedian, is another Vallee star loaned to Shoreham for the week. He's both smooth and funny.

Nina Tarasova, Pall Mall's prima donna, tells of the time she first attended a Virginia house party and in answer to the usual query, said innocently, "Oh, I'd like to have the drink of the country." They gave her a tumbler of mountain moonshine!

Sande Williams and his lads (Shar-Zad Room) have gone plumb social at evening dance sessions. They're all in "white tie and tails," wear white carnations, too. But formality goes up the chimney when they sing that demented ballad, "The Mob in Scotland."

Lyde Swygert, Rainbow Room's fresh little singer, looks sweet in an irridescent blue taffeta made with a trick bolero. More important, Lyde's singing improves every night.

Frances Chapman, greeter in the Anchor Room, can't wear black evening gowns. They make her look too slim. Of all the luck!

Evelyn Knight (King Cole Room) is going exotic in a black crepe encrusted with rhinestones.

Hour Glass' style show next Wednesday will feature either lingerie or furs, depending on the weather. That's what Manager Vincent Gallagher says. Hope for a rising temperature, boys.

A roamin' rollin' stone from the Texas Panhandle is Chet de Chastain, No. 1 saxophonist with Johnny Slaughter's orchestra in the Metronome Room. Chet shook the dust of the Texas plains from his feet at 14, has been "on his own" (except for his saxophone) ever since.

Lotus effervesces with fun and rhythm. "Tiny" Meeker (he's big as a small apartment house), sings a hoop-la version of "Bahama Mamma." Lovely Vivian Newell, late with Tommy Dorsey, does a Spanish tap dance to the "Habanera."

We love Mel Fahl's (Cafe Caprice) description of a blind date he once had in Yonkers. He says, "She looked like death on toast."

Steve 'La Sieur, Pete Macias' collaborator at Heigh Ho, is off to "hunt the wild deer and follow the roe." Steve and 20 other fellows have 2,100 acres of wild country up in the mountains of Bath County, Virginia. His parting words were, "How about a venison dinner?" Well, how about it?

For Melody Undiluted:

"It Never Was You," as sparkled up by the Harold Veo directed orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge.

Troika's Sasha and his balalaika going gay with that haunting Russian ballad, "Driver, Go Slowly, 'Cause I Have No Place to Go."

Madrillon's Johnny Shaw and orchestra giving pretty twists to Johnny's favorite tune, "My Reverie."

Hi Hat's Three M's have been partners for 15 years. Their hook-up began when they were in their teens, has lasted through the nose-dive of vaudeville and the upswing of radio and the night spots.

J. P. Morgan's Power Trust Dream Fades

United Corp. Takes Step To Cut Investments 4 Systems Affected

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 13.—The dream of the Morgan-Bonbright banking interests of creating United Corporation as a super-holding company to control their vast investments in public utility systems—conceived back in the flush days of 1929—was dissolved today.

In a letter signed by George H. Howard, its president, United Corporation notified the Securities and Exchange Commission that it would eliminate itself as a holding company as defined by the 1935 "death sentence" legislation by reducing its investments in four large utility operating systems to below the 10 per cent limit which the legislation labels as evidence of control.

These four systems and United's investment in their voting securities are Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation, 19.6 per cent; Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, 23.4 per cent; Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, 13.0 per cent, and United Gas Improvement Co., 26.1 per cent.

Howard said that United Corporation would continue as an investment company and would participate in the financing and underwriting of capital issues in the public utility and other fields.

In its transformation into an investment-underwriting company, Howard said that United would diversify its portfolio of investments as rapidly as practicable "and we believe that under favorable market conditions it will be possible by sales, exchanges or otherwise to reduce the corporation's holdings of public utility voting securities to below 10 per cent of those of any one company."

SEC to Co-operate

In expressing co-operation, SEC Chairman William O. Douglas said last evening:

"There is more than ordinary significance in the plans announced by United Corporation. The corporation "has determined to continue as an investment company and, as opportunity permits, to diversify its portfolio and participate in the financing and underwriting of new capital issues in the public utility and other fields." The corporation states further:

"The public utility industry, as well in common with all industry, has need each year for large amounts of new capital. Sound capitalization would seem to require that at least half of this new capital be raised through the issuance of equity securities. In our opinion, the United Corporation can aid in this needed equity financing and be in a position also to assist in some of the financing required in connection with the various steps of integration throughout the country.

"This should be another constructive step in aid of making funds available for strictly underwriting activities in utility and other issues."

Exports Lift Wheat Prices Half a Cent

Canadian Sales Heavy Visible Supply Drops Corn Falls From Top

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Canadian export business, totaling upward of 1,000,000 bushels, together with fears of Argentine frost damage, gave Chicago wheat prices half a cent lift today.

Something of an added stimulus came from the fact that for the first time this season the Canadian wheat visible supply figure showed a reduction. Furthermore, exporters said distressed wheat afloat for Europe was now pretty well cleared up and that a much improved demand overseas appeared to be in prospect.

Corn rose three-quarters of a cent to top quotations unreached before in six weeks, but later an increase of rural selling wiped out the gains.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅜ cent higher; December, 64@64⅛; May, 66⅛@66¼. Corn was unchanged to ⅛ cent lower; December, 48¼@48⅜; May, 51⅝@51¾. Oats unchanged to ⅛ cent up; rye unchanged to ⅜ cent advance, and provisions 2 to 7 cents down.

Argentina Pegs Wheat at 21 Cents

Buenos Aires, Nov. 15, (AP).—President Roberto M. Ortiz by decree today pegged the price of Argentine wheat at seven pesos a hundred kilos, the equivalent of 21 cents a bushel.

Planters may sell either to exporting firms willing to pay the pegged price or more, or may dispose of their crops to a national grain board which Ortiz created in another decree. The decrees followed three conferences at which Jose Padilla, minister of agriculture, declared Argentina was burdened by an oversupply of wheat.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler,
A Special Correspondent.

Reaction Continues on More Realizing European Conditions Disturbing Aviation and Traction Shares Firm

The reaction continued in the stock market today, based partly on additional profit taking sales and partly on the disturbed conditions abroad. After an early selloff which brought losses ranging up to 2 points in the leaders, there was a moderate recovery during the afternoon but more selling just before the close which left the list mixed. Judged by the composite average, where was a net decline of 0.40 point. Bullish forces were cheered by the decline in activity on the recession, only 1,465,980 shares changing hands.

Aviation and traction securities were able to move against the trend, the former on the prospect of large-scale expenditures by this and other governments for defense purposes and the latter on progress in unification. Traction bonds also were strong. Major groups of stocks were uniformly lower, however, and among leaders there were declines ranging up to 3 points.

Afternoon Rally

The afternoon recovery was led by the aviations and then the steels came back to make up virtually all of their early losses. Rails also recovered moderately and there was a pickup in the liquor and amusement groups. But at the close the losses outnumbered gains. The street appeared to be as optimistic as ever over the immediate future of trade conditions in this country even though the disturbance abroad was seen as an important factor which may interfere with international trade relations.

Announcement that this Government's trade pacts with Canada and Great Britain probably will be signed Thursday failed to bring much support for sterling, which again was under heavy pressure, reflecting another flight to this country of foreign money seeking a haven. Sterling closed off ⅝ cents, recovering about a cent from its low of the day on official support.

Gold Price Advances

Gold in the open market in London reached its highest since 1935, selling at 148 shilling 3 pence an ounce. There was a total of $1,500,000 purchased there today for shipment here.

The comeback in the aviation stocks resulted from the overnight announcement of plans to make this Nation superior to any other in the air and also the indication that money heretofore spent in various forms of relief will be diverted into defense channels. Douglas rallied 2 points from its low and Boeing, despite its unfavorable earning statement made public Monday, advanced 1¾. It was the most active of the group, followed by North American Aviation, which gained fractionally, and Consolidated, which jumped 2⅝.

Local transactions hovered around their highs for the year, gains of 1 and 2¾ points being made in the common and preferred of B. M. T. while Interborough added 1½ to a new top for the year

Steels were much steadier than on the previous day when realizing sales had erased a good part of the post-election gains. Steel common added a small fraction and Bethlehem was ⅜ up, but Republic was the leader in activity in the group with a net raise of ½ on transfers of 32,000 shares.

Motors were busily traded but prices generally showed a tendency to ease. General Motors, which led the list with dealings of 32,800 shares, was down ¼ and Chrysler lost ¾.

Bonds Mostly Lower

With few exceptions, listed bond market trends remained adverse to holders in a quiet session today. German bonds continued to drift lower in the foreign section, owing to the international incident developing as a consequence of the German war against Jews. United States Treasury bonds were idle and lower. Most speculative bonds also lost ground, but local traction issues proved a conspicuous exception, with gains of 1 to 4 points recorded on fresh indications that the unification problem is making progress. Turnover in all issues was $7,290,000.

German government bonds showed losses from fractions to 2 points, while municipal and corporate issues of Reich origin receded 1 to 3 points on the thickening international atmosphere. Italian and Polish bonds also lost ground, for those countries likewise are anti-Semitic. Best-grade foreigns were quiet and irregular. Among Latin-American default bonds the trend was almost uniformly lower, but losses were mostly in fractions.

Interborough bonds reflected advances of 1½ to more than 4 points, as the unification issue once again gained prominence. B. M. T. 4½s jumped 4 points in heavy trading, and sizable gains were registered also in Manhattan Railway issues. The speculative rail group dropped with the equities market, losses ranging from fractions to 3 points. Both interest-payers and default rails were affected. Rail holding issues were sharply lower, but the utility holding bonds were better maintained. Communications, amusement and other special groups were dull.

United States Treasury bonds merely continued the slow downward drift that reflects the wait for the new announcement on December financing. Best-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds also lost small fractions, owing to the accumulated decline in Treasury issues.

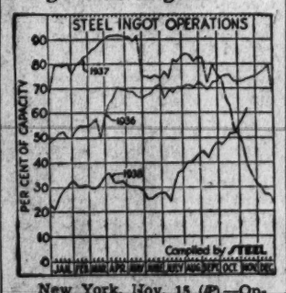
Building Boom Seen by Contractors

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Nov. 15 (AP).—Edward J. Harding, of Washington, managing director of the Associated General Contractors of America, forecast today a 50 per cent increase next year over 1938 in the building program for private industry. He also predicted the 1939 public works building program would be the largest of any year since the depression. Harding spoke before the governing board of the national association in session here.

"If the proposed national defense program is carried out," he said, "there will be a heavy expansion of facilities in several branches of industry, particularly in public utilities."

Steel Operations Forge Still Higher



New York, Nov. 15 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 1.6 points to 62.6 per cent of capacity, compared with 61 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

Plan Wipes Out Common Stock Of C. & E. Ill.

ICC Cuts Capital Pares Fixed Charges C. & O. Has Interest

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission adopted a final plan of reorganization yesterday for the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway Co. The new arrangement wipes out present common stockholders.

The plan reduces the railway's capitalization from about $81,000,000 to $61,000,000 and fixed interest charges from $1,772,810 annually to $509,140. In addition to the fixed interest charges, the plan provides contingent interest of $767,725 annually, but payment of this will be made only if earned.

The Virginia Transportation Co., which is controlled by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co., owns slightly more than 50 per cent of voting control of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois. This would be reduced to 12.4 per cent under the commission's reorganization plan.

Court to Rule

The plan now goes to the Federal District Court for the Northern District of Illinois for action. If approved by the court it will be submitted to security holders. Approval by two-thirds of each of the various groups of security holders would put the plan into effect. The court, however, has authority to put it into effect even if it should fail of this approval.

The commission, in eliminating present common stockholders from participation in the reorganized company, said that "The equity of the holders of common stock in the company of the debtor, if such equity exists, has no value."

Present preferred stockholders would receive one share of new common for each share of preferred now held. Other present security holders would receive new securities in exchange for their holdings, or cash settlements.

London, Nov. 15.—Share prices weakened as a steady stream of small liquidating orders flowed into today's stock market. Rubbers declined following announcement of the export quota increase. Transatlantics were about steady. Gilt-edge and German loans fell back.

Paris.—The bourse closed today with most sections well supported. Rentes, however, dipped 10 to 40 centimes and international issues were weak. Bank of France advanced 420 francs, while Royal Dutch lost 65.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures ended 2 to 5 points lower today as local professional support was offset by selling at limits. Wheat futures advanced ¼ to ⅛ price today in wake of North American price trends Monday and fixing of minimum prices on new wheat in the Argentine.

How to Torture Your Husband

Bob Burns Says—

There's no question in my mind but what these modern conveniences are makin' us soft. If they keep on inventin' innovations, it's only a question of time until we'll lose the use of our muscles altogether.

Aunt Boo use' ta do all the chores around the house and help take care of the farm and she never seemed to get tired, but pretty soon after she moved out here and got an apartment where they had all the modern conveniences, I called on her and found her sittin' in a chair, exhausted. I asked her what was the trouble and she said "I'm all tuckered out from pushin' buttons!"

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

ANY speculation among scientists about who is going to get the position of Weather Bureau director, made vacant by the death of Dr. W. R. Gregg, is expected to continue because the place won't be filled in the immediate future, someone who knows lets it be known. It's an important job, aside from $8,000 consideration.

It's important in the inner circles because the Weather Bureau director is acting Secretary of Agriculture in the absence of the Secretary. And it is a post which, traditionally, has been well treated. In the memory of man it has never been filled except by a first-rate scientist—and remember that the position is subject to Presidential appointment.

The Presidents have leaned heavily on recommendations from the Secretaries of Agriculture, and the Secretaries have depended almost entirely on the recommendations of scientific bodies. Through such a process, the bureau has consistently been topped by competent directors. It has never been a political proposition, though the way for politics in the appointment is abundantly open. They have just always played fair by the great bureau. So fair, in fact, that now with a vacancy wide open, you hear of no names being politicated about as possible successors to the late Dr. Gregg.

IF YOU'RE an autogiro pilot, the Government can possibly use your flights. Also (if your flights are used) they will pay you $3,200 a year. The employer will be the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, and the work locale, Bloomfield, N. J. The Civil Service Commission wants applicants.

Here's what it's all about. They use the autogiro to help in investigation of tree and plant diseases. The type of machine, obviously, is more satisfactory because it can fly low and fairly slowly over the areas under investigation, permitting the observer to see the conditions, such as blight from the Japanese beetle or the various forms of defoliation.

There are not many of these ships in the agriculture service; the number possibly doesn't exceed a half a dozen and the work isn't always full time. At best it is a transient business, as the pilots and autogiros are moved about from place to place in the country, to wherever the emergency calls. They can't call the sky their own for many days.

And their work isn't conclusive in the service; for whatever they detect from the air has to be followed up by crews working on the ground. But the detection work can always be made better from the air, the officials state.

Incidentally, the pilots don't have to own their ships; the bureau has enough of these for the activity. And the bureau goes to the bother of getting permission to fly the ships low over the areas. All the pilot has to do is operate his autogiro. Under the announced examination, applicants must possess a valid certificate of competency, either transport or private, and must have had at least 100 solo flying hours with autogiro aircraft. The top age limit is 48.

NOTES: The District Federation of Federal Employes Unions is considering renting or buying a suitable and centrally located building for use as a meeting place for its several member organizations, and to afford dormitory, club house, recreational and entertainment facilities for members. The matter has been referred to the executive committee for consideration and report. . . . The Civil Service Commission has another interesting job on tap, that of senior biological aid in injurious mammal control. The winner will be an administrator who oversees the hunters who shoot the coyotte, the jack rabbits, the mountain lions and other nuisances. The pay is $2,000 and applicants must have had some practical experience with an authorized organization in the control of injurious mammals. . . . Westward drifts the star of merit. The 1939 Territorial Legislature will be asked by the Hawaiian Government Employees Association for a merit system covering all Hawaiian government employes. . . . N. F. F. E.'s Gertrude McNally has installed officers of Local Union 262, as follows: J. O. Burnham, president; W. E. Perry, first vice president; Mrs. Ola G. King, second vice president; I. H. Lehman, third vice president; E. C. Hooper, financial secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Virginia Schaefer, recording secretary, and Mrs. Retta C. Walsmith, trustee for three years.

There are elements of greatness in Friedrich Hebbel's drama of "Herod and Mariamne" that have not been captured in Clemence Dane's English prose adaptation of the classic play, presented by Katharine Cornell in the National Theater last night.

Concerning itself with events in ancient Judea immediately before the birth of Christ, events as mighty as those that are reshaping the nations of the earth today, the play peoples itself with heroic figures in whom were instinct the tremendous impulses of pride, passion and conquest. Herod, King of Judea, ruled with Mariamne, whose brother, Aristobulus III, he had caused to be murdered to perpetuate his reign upon the throne. Octavius Caesar, in Rome, had dispatched Anthony to Egypt to form an alliance with Cleopatra in the far-flung interests of a complete world dominance by the Roman Empire. The courts of all the rulers were honeycombed with jealousy, intrigue and the lust for bitter revenge for daring and far-reaching treacheries. The bloody building of empire spans the highest and the lowest qualities of mind and heart with which man may be endowed.

Rooted in this mire of hatreds, enmities, jealousies and lusts there blossomed a transcendent love between Herod and his queen. A love of such passionate and intoxicating intensity that it transported them, tortured them and consumed them in its blazing flame. There is something of magnificence, nobility and grandeur in such a posturing of the grand passion against a mosaic of such titanic events. It is the stuff of which enduring dramas of spacious and sometimes fantastic dimensions are contrived.

It is in these majestic proportions that Hebbel shaped his tragedy in its original blank-verse form. It is this quality of immensity that seems almost completely to have eluded Miss Dane in her prose adaptation. It is graced by only an occasional noble flow of speech and seldom by those galvanizing periods of power essential to drama in the heroic mold.

Beyond the ineptness of the adapter's work, annoyance at the present stature of "Herod and Mariamne" cannot, with either justification or justice, be carried. It has been staged with dignity and beauty and costumed with an eye-filling and arresting array of colors. It is furthermore, acted by Miss Cornell and her associates as competently and convincingly as the diluted substance of the two acts and five scenes permits.

As the queen whose love for her king was so overwhelming that she expected him to know that she would die when he died, Miss Cornell presents a Mariamne of vast beauty, tenderness and tragically rebellious spirit. Herod's vague doubts of the overpowering strength of her love and his nebulous suspicions of her fidelity are, to her, a death sentence. That he should twice set a spy to slay her, to prevent another's possessing her charms, if he should die in battle, is the unforgivable affront. She dies, self-condemned at her own trial, to bring to her lord and master, after her death, the full knowledge of her devotion—and her pride. Miss Cornell encompasses all this with the fluent grace of an admirable artiste. Had Miss Dane written a better part, Miss Cornell would have made it great.

Kortner Excels As Herod

Herod, the sovereign whose ruse was his own undoing, and the ruse was his own undoing and the end of all his dreams, is played by Fritz Kortner, eminent German actor, making his American stage debut in this role. Kortner's interpretation of the character is one of infinite variety and deep feeling.
